ASSEMBLY:

OR

Scotch Reformation.

A

COMEDY.

As it was acted by the Persons in the Drama.

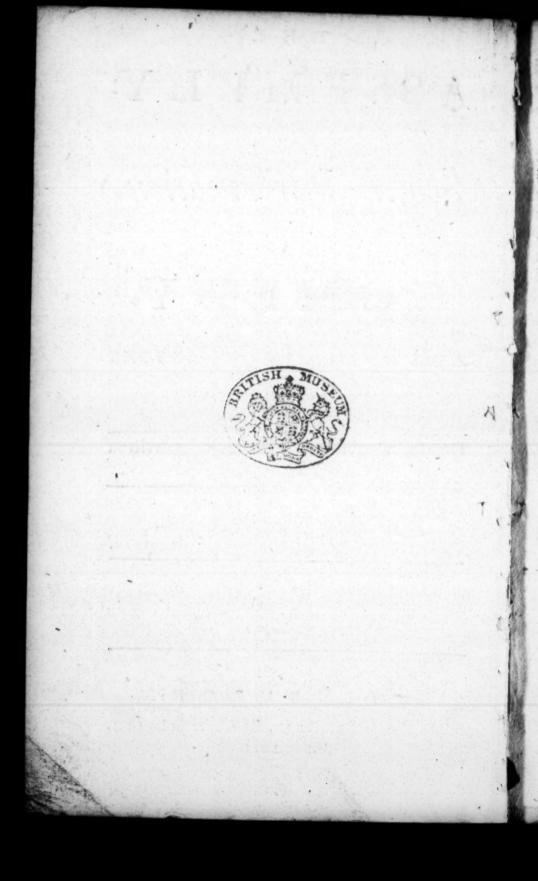

Done from the original Manuscript written in the Year 1692.

Innumeræ pestes Erebi, quascunque sinistro
Nox genuit fætu — CLAUDIAN.

EDINBURGH

Printed for JAMES REID, Bookfeller in LEITH, M.DCC.LXVI.

PREFACE.

Play in our Nation, where Wit fo feldom appears, will be gazed upon by some, who do not understand the Nature of the thing, and laughed at by others who think Wit and Ingenuity, like fine Periwigs and fashionable Clothes, must be fetched from foreign Places to ferve their Caprice or please their Humour. I have seen some Pieces of Wit in our own Country, which, if they had come from France or England, would have been esteemed the highest Dashes of some excellent Pen; yet they lie here unregarded and neglected by the most Part of our intelligent Men. This fufficiently argues, that we generally have a Difgust of our own, and too great a Fondness for Things which come from abroad. English have a far different Humour from this: They applaud nothing but what grows in their own Soil, and is produced in their own Air. I think they are too indulgent and partial to themselves, and we are too fevere and sharp on one another; both Extremes should be shunned: And therefore, I intreat my Countrymen, in their cenfuring and judging this Work, that they would only consider the Play, and not regard the Persons who write it. In Defence of this Essay we must engage two Parties, the Fa-A 2 naticks

A

dob

1

natioks and Criticks. The Fanaticks will call us Atheists, as they term those who oppose them in the least Punctilio. This is all the Answer we can expect from them; for they are bleft with Stupidity, and even Satireproof; so they jogg on securely, and purfue their own Interests, without caring what the World knows or fays of them. will take some more pains to please the Criticks, and will give them an ingenuous Account of the whole Matter. We acknowledge that there is not in our Play that same Embellishment of Art, Politeness of Language, or Regularity of Plot, which is obferved in some of the late English Comedies. The People we live among are narrow and stingy, and we are not sharpened with the Converse which other Places allow; befides, it is our first Esfay, which merits some Excuse, and the Truth of the Matters of Fact may make also some Atonement for our Faults. We have not had Time to give our Invention Scope, but only to rouse up and exercise our Memory; we have rather played the Part of a true Historian than of an exact Comedian. The most Part of the Stories here related were faid by one or other of the Presbyterian Party. We have fometimes put these Tales in the Mouths of others than those who said them, but that very feldom. Nor could we bring on the Stage all the Members of the General Assembly, vill call oppose

all the

or they

Satire-

d pur-

g what

e Cri-

s Ac-

snow-fame

Lan-

is ob-

ome-

rrow

with

; be-fome

rs of

for give

e up

ther

n of

the ro-

nave

uths

but

on eral

oly,

We

Assembly, for that would have spoiled the Decorum of the Play. But I hope the judicious and impartial Reader will easily discern, that we have attributed nothing to any but what is suitable and agreeable to his Character.

That the Earl of Crawfurd (who is under the Name My Lord Whigridden) did several Times mistake the Meaning of the Assembly, is as certain as any thing can be; for, when the Brethren were speaking about the Terms of Communion with the Episcopal Party, he took it for the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, and so made a ridiculous Speech to that Effect. The Brethren, who had no Respect to his Dignity, told him roughly, that he knew not what he was faying; for they think Ill-manners as effential to Religion as Want of Sense. That he called the whole Crowd of People, dispersed through the Assembly-house, a Board, (as he used to call the Council-table) is known by every body who frequented their Meetings. That we make him take Plantations of Gardens for Plantations of Kirks, is natural enough for a Man who understands nothing but Gardenry, and frequently uses to mistake. He always mixes together Bits of Nehemiah and Pieces of Pembroke's Arcadia, as we may fee in his printed Speech before the Parliament, which I believe is the strangest Medley ever was feen. That he a 3

Pr

fr

de of

T

p fe

T i

r H

1

he fought Months to advise and fit himself ho for being a Member of the Assembly, when the it was to fit but one, is clear from the hi-th storical Account of the General Assembly, the Matters of Fact in it none yet had the Brow to deny. For all his Pretences to Religion, yet, to oblige a Friend, or compliment one whom he is afraid of, he will do Things both against his Conscience and his Reason, for so he lately told the Viscount of Tarbat he had done, in subscribing an Act, for his Pension. His Malice and Injustice to the Episcopal Clergy, even to those who complied to the Civil Government, is well known in this Kingdom; and that his Sense is as little as his Estate, which is none at all, no Man who hath any Sense doubts it.

The Moderator, Mr. Hugh Kennedy, hath Matter enough to do his own Business, and is not much obliged to borrow Expressions from his canting Brethren. Every body, who had the Honour to fee him in the Chair, must confess that he began his Speeches ordinarily with a By his Providence we are met bere in this Place; We are again re-affembled; and, I'll tell you positively what it is, and negatively what it is not; and fuch Hap-stumble as this into pure Nonfense. He was so violent and fiery, that he was excommunicated long ago by the Presbyterians themselves, as a Fire-brand sent from Hell to inflame Christ's Kirk here on Earth. It is known how embly, ad the to Reomplivill do nd his count n Act, uffice who well Sense it all,

hath and Tions ody, hair, ormet led; neible vioted res,

me wn

nimfelf how he prayed, in the Assembly, to drown when the Noise, and silence the Gabble of the Brethe hi- thren. He uses his own Words in all the Prayers except this one, He desires Grace from God, if he would expect Glory, which indeed is borrowed from one Mein, a Brother of his, who preaches just now at Dalkeith. The Curates must fall a Victim to his Fury; for none of them, tho' they fully comply, can keep their Livings, while he poffesses his Chair, tho' the Nobility and Gentry, yea, King and Queen, should request it. Kings, as well as Curates, if they be not covenanted, (for it they phrase it) must be deposed, yea, killed oo, if they be not for the good Cause. They say the Moderator is witty, and his own Party calls him pawky. The only Instance of this, which I know, is, that he made a better Bargain than Judas; for Judas fold our Saviour for thirty Pieces of Silver; but Mr. Kennedy got a hundred Pieces of Gold for his Part in felling King Charles I. Poor filly, fickle Fudas repented, and flung back the Money again; but wife, stedfast Mr. Kennedy keeps well what he got, and thirsts for more, and would take off a Tyrant's Head (for fo he names all Kings) with as great Pleafure, as he just now possesses a Curate's Living.

When we represent Mr. Gilbert Rule, (who is under the Name Mr. Salathiel Littlefense) we do not confine ourselves closely to his Discourses in the General Assembly 1 but we take in some of his Speeches said ir by the College this Winter. That famous Say Par ing of his in a publick Lecture, Si aliquus Ge virus colebit falfum Deum, seu verum Deum udia non prascriptum est, iste virus est guiltus idola. Th tria, is so known through the Town, that hir he is nicknamed Doctor Guiltus from that He very Thing. If I should tell his Management of the College this Winter, and his ta Latin Speeches, or rather his Scotch Speech. D es ending in Latin Terminations, with a ab Thousand other Follies and Villanies, it ar would make a pleasant enough Comedy by itself, and sufficiently expose the Presbyterians, who have picked him out of their whole Party to fill fuch a considerable Place, and to succeed so excellent a Man as the learned Dr. Monro. Ignorance, which is a fitter Parent of Impudence than Devotion, made this Fellow attack the learned Dr. Stilling fleet with an impertinent Scribble on an impertinent Subject, to wit, on the Jure-divino-ship of Presbytery, which few Men of Sense or Ingenuity ever pretended to main tain. I am confident, if I should rake the Dunghill of his Crimes, and fully declare his Ignorance and Knavery to the World, none would read his Writings who read his Life. In short, his Character is, always to be nibbling at Speeches, often speaking Nonsense, and still wrong Latin. It

Membly It were an unpardonable Fault if the wores said ir by Mr. Kirktoun did not bear a considerable ous Say. Part in our Play; he who hath the true Mien, aliquii Gesture, Actings, and Speeches of a Come-Deum udian, when he hath once got into the Pulpit. us idola. The People of the Town use to flock about vn, that him, as they use to do about a Stage-Player, om that He'll tell you from any Text, of five lost Janage- Labours, three Opportunities, three Lamenand his tations, three Woes, three Prophecies, three Speech. Doubts, three Fears, a Proposal, and a Word with a about Scotland, and another about a Dog, ies, it and so he has done. Then, when he is to fall upon Controverfy, drawing up and down edy by his Breeches, he'll tell you, he must take a sbyte-Word of a Whore, (for fo he names the their Church of Rome) fo that leads him to speak Place, about the Virgin Mary, whom, he fays, her as the Husband Joseph felt the first Night he bedh is a ded with her, and found her with Child, otion, and immediately concluded she was a Whore, . Stil-(as I would have done myfelf, fays he) and on an was going to put her away: For who could e-dihave been jealous of the Holy Ghost? n of nain-

He is as comical in giving the Communion; for lately, at Cramond, he clapt a Bit of Bread in his next Neighbour's Hand, and faid, Saint, eat this, and your bread's baken. Then he took the Cup, and defired them all to drink heartily, for they were all very welcome. We must give you some Account of his Way of praying. He'll pray that God would

It

the

clare

orld,

his

s to ting.

thi

ing

bu

of

in

H

to

no

ar

N

la

fo

gd

tl

(

t

C

t

1

1

would bring back our banished King; then he will make a long Stop, and fo furprise the Audience: Then he'll tell God not to mistake him, for it is not King James, but King Fefus, who hath been banithed thefe twenty-eight Years. Then, when he prays for People troubled in Spirit, he'll tell, it is a wholesome Disease, and wish that many more were so, because he was once bound himself. He justly bears the Name of Plain Dealer, for he opposed the whole Assembly often, and stumbled into many sad Truths. He faid, their Fool-praying was hypocritical, and that they were feeking their own Interest. And, in a Sermon lately preached, he fairly arraigned the Government, and faid, The Earl of H-, who is true to his God and his King in his own Fashion, he's clapt up in Prison; but the Earl of S-, who's true to none of them, he's at present Freedom; I think (fays he) our Government shall never be right. His Sermons are Comedies without Plots; they are the Chat of the Taverns and Coffee-houses; the Divertisement, of the young People in Town. short he is more famous for these Notes of his Sermons, than the other is for his Latin. When he takes a Freak in his Head, he's for Moderation; not out of any Kindness he has for the Episcopal Clergy, but out of an Humour of Singularity, a Spirit of Contradiction, and often for Want of thinking;

then arprife not to f, but thefe prays l, it is many

Plain mbly ruths. pocritheir lately vernwho is shion, freefhall dedies

f the ertifeIn
des of s LaHead, Kindbut Spirit

nt of

ing;

thinking; for he who speaks without thinking cannot be very consequential to himself, but fall into a great many Absurdities.

Mr. Fraser of Brae deserveth the Name of Turbulent very well: for he's as husting.

of Turbulent very well; for he's as huffing, insolent, cross-grain'd a Fellow as ever lived. His whole Trade, when he was young, was to debauch Ladies Waiting-women; but now, when he's graver, he talks obscenely, and shews a thing not to be named to the Maid, as he did to a great many Women lately at the Cross of Dunfermline. for Women he takes Wine, and drinks as great a Quantity of hard Sack as Curates do of Ale. His Party calls the Fumes of the Liquor the Operations of the Spirit of God, and his Fury and Madness they term true Zeal. The most Part of the Articles of the Libella Universalis was made use of by him to thrust out the Episcopal Clergy of Fife. Mr. Johnston of Burntisland, and Mr. Johnston of Saline, were both suspended by him for being ordained by a Bishop, and recommending The Whole Duty of Man; and many more, for these, and the rest of the ridiculous Articles in that universal Libel; (for I assure you that was their exact Way of libelling.) The Episcopal Ministers could not have the Liberty to fee or hear the Witnesses depose against them; and particularly, when Mr. Bowes, Minister at Abbots-hail, quoted an Act of Parliament to this Purpose,

Purpose, Mr. Fraser told him roundly, that he was not to be governed by the Acts of Parliament, but by the Spirit of God. This Hero made a Speech against the Lord's Pray er, not long ago, in his own Church at Culross, going through all the Articles of it. proving that we should not say it. (fays he) We cannot fay, Our Father which are in Heaven, except we knew we were predestinated; for I'm sure the Devil's a Father to many of you. He goes on, If you were going to Bed at Night, it were Nonfense to fay, Give us this Day our daily Bread. Then, (continues he) if I were owing any of you 1000 Merks, none of you would forgive me; for no more can you fay, Forgive us our Debts as we forgive our Debtors. So, after this Fashion he refuted the faying of the Lord's Prayer. But another Presbyterian Minister in the North, Mr. - - was much franker, and faid, If ever Christ was drunk in his Life, it was when he made this Prayer. In short, we have made Mr. Fraser speak nothing but what he actually faid, either in the General Assembly, in his Sermons, or in the Presbytery of Culrofs, of which he is Moderator.

Mr. David Williamson is called Mr. Sololomon Cherry-Trees, for that famous Action of his, in getting with Child the Lady Cherry-Trees's Daughter, in that Instant when the Soldiers were searching the House to carry him away to suffer the just Punishment of a Rebel and a Traitor. We ingenuously confess, that all the Speeches made by Mr. Solomon were not actually faid by Mr. David; but I think all that was faid is agreeable enough to his Character, who isso famous for Love Intrigues, who preaches so oft out of the Canticles, and talks so much in his Sermons, of Beds of Roses, and Dams of Love. Tho' he be pretty old, yet Nature is not so much decayed in him as in the other. He carries about with him the old Man in the literal Sense; he is a compleat Tartuffe, and under the Mask of Piety he acts his lascivious Tricks. Not a Year ago, he sent for a young Wench, and told her that she was with Child. She anfwered she was not with Child. Then he faid he ought to fee if it was so; so he handled her Breast and Belly very roughly, and after this he fat down and prayed a long while with her. The Maid gives this Account herself; Modesty would not allow her to fay more, but we may eafily guess the reft.

ment

I shall not mention the extraordinary Avarice and Covetousness of the Presbyterian Ministers, which is more peculiar to them than to any Set of Men in the World: Neither shall I tell how they devour Widows Houses, chouse old filly Women, ruin good Families, and, by their Sneaking and Cheating, get good Estates, even in the Times

e have hat he Memytery . Solo-Action

Cher-

when

ise to unish-

ment

ly, that

Acts of

. This

s Pray

at Cul-

of it,

bich art

redesti-

ather to ere go-

to fay,

Then,

of you

me; fo

ebts as alhion

rayer.

in the

d faid,

it was

I/t, imes of Perfecution, (as they call them) or I don't pretend, in this Place, to give in exact Account or History of the Lives and Actions of those Presbyterian Heroes; that would swell this Preface to a big Volume; but I only relate some Matters of Fact, without which our Play cannot be well understood. Since these are the chief Champions for the Good Old Cause, and God-like Saints of the Covenant, who by their own Party are esteemed by far the best and most learned, the most eminent for Gifts and Graces, it will be no Difficulty to make a Judgment of the rest of them.

by GE

II V

" dy

The Part that Mr. Shittle bears in our Play, is a Character of the whole complying Episcopal Ministers. I shall name one Mr. De——— who made an Address to the Commission of the Kirk, telling them how he and his Brethren had fully complied with the Civil Government, and would as frankly comply with their Kirk Government, and desired to act as Presbyters in this Church. The Address was refused, and it was resolved, that none who served under Episcopacy, and had taken the Test, should be admitted into the Kirk; "For " (say they) if we should admit these Men, "who have changed their Principles, and

"broken their Oaths, we could not be se-"cure of them; tho' we had them under "a thousand Ties, yet they would be reathem)

o give

Lives

eroes;

ig Vo-

ers of

not be chief

, and

ho by ar the ninent

fficul-

them.

n our

nply-

e one

ess to them

com-

vould

vern-

rs in used,

rved

Test,

For

Men,

and

e fender

ready

dy to join with Prelacy if it should please " the prevailing Party to fet it up again; " then we, being the smaller Part, should be thrust out again." The Reason is sufficiently good for those who are only led by Interest. The Speeches made by Mr. Turncoat are the very Words which were spoke by some young Men, who had their Education under Episcopacy. I could name some of them, but they are so filly and mean-spirited Fellows, that I think it not worth my Time to trouble the Reader or myself in taking particular notice of them. The Love-scenes contain the true Way of the Presbyterian Wooing; the Scenes betwixt the News-mongers contain the true and genuine Language of the Bigots of both Parties; and the Scene about the Characters needs no Commentary, fince they are just and exact.

Having briefly related the Matters of Fact of which our Play is made up, I shall in few Words answer the Objections that may be made against the Manner of writing it. First, then, the Criticks perhaps will say, that our Play is made up of two Plots, the one of Love, the other about the General Assembly. Suppose this were true, we might defend ourselves by Examples of some of the Ancients and Moderns too, of no small Note, who have done this. But we are not obliged to seek Shelter under

B 2 Authority,

Authority, for Reason will sufficiently defend us. Our entire and uniform Plot is, to represent the Villainy and Folly of the Presbyterians in their publick Meetings, and the private Transactions of their Lives; and, how we have succeeded in both, we leave it to the Judgment of the ingenuous Reader.

Secondly, It may be said that the Scene about my Lord Huffy hath no Connexion with the Plot, and that his Lordship makes a mere Parenthesis in our Play. I answer, he does fo in the State, and dashes so thro' thick and thin, that it is hard to get him kept out of any thing. Besides, all the Matters of Fact faid about him are very true, and he's a great Hero in the Reformation; and I do not fee but this Scene agrees as well with the principal Plot, as the Reconcilement of Thais and Phadra, in Terence's Eunuch, with the Marriage of Cherea and Chremes's Sifter, which is principally intended by the Poet; yet it is thought regular enough by all the judicious Criticks.

The third Objection is made by the grave and serious Men, who don't quarrel the Regularity of the Plot, but are startled at some Expressions. They say we make the Canticles a Pimp to Lust, and that our Lovers fetch their Compliments, and make their Assignations out of that Book; which is formally to burlesque the Scripture. These

Gentlemens

G

te Til was

t

Gentlemens Zeal hath by far got the better of their Reason. If they would consider the Ancients Behaviour in this Matter, they would foon have cooler Thoughts. Juvenal, in his Satires, paints the Vices of the Age in ugly broad Terms, just as they were acted, out of a mere Design to lash Men from their Follies, and fright them from their Vices, by the ugly Representations of them. Even the Scripture itself brings in the Fool faying in his Heart, There is no God; and Absalom consulting and acting Treason against his Father and King; yet, for all that, the Penmen are neither to be accused of Atheism nor Treason: Why may not we also bring in Hypocrites, with Religion in their Mouths, acting the greatest Villainy that was ever heard of?

Fourthly, It may be objected, that for all our Pretences to Truth and Sincerity in Matters of Fact, yet we talk at random in the last Scene, where we make the Presbyterian Ministers speak basely and maliciously of all Kings, and tell the Captain of the Guard, that they had a Commission under the Broad Seal of Heaven, and so refuse to rise till they were compelled by Force, and then to run away in Confusion, cursing their Enemies. This is easily answered, if we consider that the General Assembly always used to contradict and thwart the State, as is clear by several of their Acts,.

B 3

but

ome Canvers heir

ly de-

Plot is,

of the

etings,

Lives;

h, we

enuous

Scene

exion

makes

fwer.

thro'

t him

I the

very efor-

ne as the

n Teberea

y in-egu-

rave Re-

for-

ens

but particularly, by one which bears the re Name of An Act and Declaration of the Ge. neral Affembly against the Act of Parliament and Committee of Estates.

It may likeways be considered, that the Presbyterians are Enemies to Monarchy; for this is the third Time that Presbytery has been established in Scotland, and still upon the Death or Banishment of some of their lawful Sovereigns. Also it cannot be denied, but the present Presbyterian Ministers have as much Fury and as little Wit as in the Time of Cromwell the Usurper, when they fat without an Order from the State, and acted independently of it, till Colonel Cotterall was fent with a Regiment to raise them. They told him they had a Commission to sit, and presented the Bible to him. He defired them to read it. The Brethren were a little puzzled at that. Then the Colonel threatned to drag them thence; fo they were forced to rife, and never met till this Time. The Chorus is as pertinent as any thing can be, fince they are a Set of Men who never forgive any Injury, and, instead of praying for Conversion, they pour down Curies for the Confusion of their Enemies.

Our Design in this Essay is fully to represent the Villainy and Folly of the Fanaticks, that fo, when they are in fober Mood, they may feriously reflect on them, and repent.

fo

ji is b

t

the Ge. liament

nat the y; for ry has l upon their

be de-Minie Wit urper, m the

Il Coent to had a Bible

The Then nce; met nent

Set and, they of

reanapod. and. ent.

ears the repent for what is past, and make amends for the future, if it be possible; or else that the Civil Government may be awakened and roused to rid us of the Impertinence and Tyranny of this Gang, who injuriously treat all good and learned Men, and are Enemies to human Society itself. This Play was begun just after the King of France took Mons, as is clearly intimated in the first Scene; but, by Reason of some Gentlemens going to the Country, who were concerned in it, it lay dormant four Months; then it was fet about again, and was very foon compleated. We confess it was hastily huddled together, for we were not a Fortnight about the whole Work, by reason of a Multitude of Business the Authors were entangled in. I hope this will also draw a favourable Cenfure from the ingenuous Reader. It was the Employment of our idle Hours, and we were sufficiently pleased and diverted by it. In short, Reader, if you take half as much Pleasure in reading it, as we did in writing it, you will neither think your Money nor Pains ill bestowed.

PRO-

PROLOGUE

UR Northern Country seldom tastes of Wit; The too cold Clime is justly blam'd for it. Nothing our Hearts can move, or Fancy bribe, Except the Gibb'rish of the canting Tribe. 'Tis a long while since any Play hath been, Except Rope-dancing, in our Nation feen; But now, in this our all-reforming Age, We've got a Play-The Pulpit's turn'd a Stage! And Jack the Actor doth appear devout, (The only Way to catch the fenfeles Rout) With Hums and Haws, and whining Voice and Tone, He preaches Nonfense and Rebellion: And So obtains his Int'rest and Design, To break the Church and abdicate the King! Instead of Prayers, he makes Use of Lies, Impostures, Shams and horrid Forgeries. He useth Cannons in the lit'ral Sense, And calls the worst Rebellion Self-defence : Kirk-discipline he seemingly doth prize, Using in private Venus' Exercise. He teaches Children how to disobey, And Chake the Laws of all Morality. Yet, notwithstanding, he slurs o'er the same E'en with Religion's all-attoning Name ; These Arms and Weapons fairly represent The Presbyterian Church militant. True Comedy should Humour represent : I think, for once, we've well enough hit on't, No Character's too wild, nor yet extravagant :

PROLOGUE.

xxi

For there is nothing treated in our Play,
But what all know the Whigs do act and say;
Thus you've a Taste of their new Gospel-way.
Our Authors gently do bespeak and pray
The Criticks favour for their first Essay.
Sure they have Reason; for the Scottish Wit
Is only given to censure, not to write:
Yet if this Play but take, we'll promise more,
For of this Kind we have laid up in Store
Matter enough to make at least a Score.

Dramatis

d Tone,

Stage!

JE.

Wit;

y bribe,

it.

For

Dramatis Personæ.

MEN.

Will, a discreet smart Gentleman. Frank, his Comerade, not well skilled in Divinity and newly come from his Travels. Mr. Novel, a Jacobite News-monger. Mr. Abednego Visioner, a Whig News-monger. Lord Whigridden, an empty Fool, & fanatick Peers. Lord Huffy, a meer Madcap, Moderator, Mr. Hugh Kennedy, Mr. Timothy Turbulent, Mr. James Fraser 3 of Brae, Mr. Salathiel Littlesense, Mr. Gilbert Rule, Mr. Covenant Plain-dealer, Mr. Kirktoun, Mr. Solomon Cherry-Trees, Mr. David Williamson, Clerk, Mr. Spaldin, Ruling Elder, Laird Littlewit, a North-country Man, Mr. Shittle, a complying Episcopal Minister. Mr. Orthodox, a non-complying Episcopal Minister. Mr. Turncoat, an Episcopal Expectant, turned Fa-

WOMEN.

Old Lady, a Bigot.
Mrs. Rachel, her Daughter.
Mrs. Violetta, Mrs. Laura,
her Nieces.

Mr. Wordy, a Presbyterian Chaplain.

nutick.

Captain of the Guard, Maids, a Webster, Boy, Drawers, Boatmen, Hirers, Fiddlers, Fornicatrix, Huntsman and Dogs, &c.

SCENE, EDINBURGH.

THE

W

go

m

e

I

]

ASSEMBLY:

OR

and

er.

Scotch Reformation.

A

COMEDY.

ACT I. SCENE I.

The Bull-Tavern.

Will. and Frank.

Will. DEAR Frank, dare I trust mine Eyes! what a Devil hath brought you hither? Fra. A Borrowstounness Ship, and a good Protestant Wind. Dear Will, how glad am I to see thee; you, with St. Giles's so nigh, convince me I am in Edinburgh.

Will. Why? hath your Sea-voyage fo distemper'd your Head, that you doubt on't?

Fra. No; but I have walked the streets since Six, encompassed with so many strange Faces, that I imagined myself cast upon some new Plantation on the other Side of the Globe, for they look not like the Inhabitants of this World.

Will. Neither indeed are they, for they came from Heaven; and some of them, you see, have broke their their Backs i' the falling But how long hast thou been in Town?

Fra. Short while as yet.—Upon my first Arrival I was carried to my Lord Whigridden, all the Way the Crowd gazing on me as some American Monster. This Peer, inclos'd with a Dozen of grimacing Fellows, dress'd up in Cloaks, cringing and bowing to him like so many Beggars seeking Supply from a Country Presbytery, asked me when the Siege of Mons was raised.

Will. What answered you then?

Fra. I said, as the Truth was, the 28th of March, stylo novo. Replies one of these Reverend Gentlemen, We ask not about the Siege of Stylo-novo in Savoy, but Mons upon the Rhine. Says another, How many lost King William in that Enterprise? Not one, answered I; for it was done ere he came. 'Tis a wonderful Providence then, said he; 'tis the Doing of the Lord, said another; there's nothing impossible with God, said a third.

Will. - What faid you all the while?

Fra. You may be fure I had little to fay in this new Way.——But, fays that Shadow of Nobility, Is King William for prefent at Mons? No indeed, faid I; but King Lewis is: Which I had scarcely uttered, when, with the universal Consent of the whole Company, I was sentenced to Imprisonment, for a certain Animal called a Suspected Person; and hardly, after an ingenuous Relation of the whole Story, escaped with the Liberty to take a Glass of good Claret with my old Friend here.

Will. Good Claret, say you! Faith that's hard, without the Miracle of the Marriage of Cana in Galilee. We've got a Set of Men, who call themselves Christ's Disciples, but, methinks, they are very unlike their Master; for the first Effect of his Power was, to give his good Wine: and the first Effect of theirs is to take it from us.

Fra.

Fra

Tippo

hoft f

tafte '

King

han

the

Fr

W

Fr

than

call i

com

drin

whe

we't

men

for

of S

to g

fter:

COIL

our

nev

fay.

feil

Rig

qu

Pa

tio

bre

Fa

1

1

1

W

Wi

Fra. In quest of good Wine, commend me to Hippocrates's Disciples; I always found their Advice most scassonable in that, i'faith. Come, Drawer, let's raste what you have.

Will. — Thy Health, Frank; Devil take me if King James wou'd be welcomer to a starving Curate, than thou art to me.

thou

y first

, all

rican

gri-

and

apply

Siege

arch,

ntle-

n Sa-

How

one,

is a oing

poi-

this bili-

leed,

cely

the

ent,

and hole

s of

ard,

Ga-

lves

like

vas,

cirs

Fra.

Fra. Canst thou give me no Account of my Friends the Country?

Will. Little or none at all.

Fra. Then I find there is nothing more hard than to avoid speaking about the Times, as they call it.

Will. Except it be speaking good of them tho', for my own Part, I have no Reason to complain, for I find them as good whoring and drinking Times as ever; only with this Difference, whereas before we were most Christian Drunkards, we're now turn'd most Catholick; and the Compliments we took before out of Cassandra and Cleopatra, for our Mistresses, we're now beholden to the Song of Solomon for them. The Money we were wont to give to Bawds, we now give to fanatick Ministers Wives; and whereas before, honest Fellows coined new Oaths at a Glass of Wine, we now send our Representatives to Parliament to do it for us.

Fra. A wonderful Reformation indeed! But what new Oaths are thefe, I pray?

Will. The Allegiance and Affurance; that is to fay, I fwear King William has Right to what he posfeiseth, else I can no longer possess what I have

Right to.

Fra. — Faith there's no Danger i'the Confequence; for I confess I should think it a subtle Parliament could contrive an Oath which the Nation wou'd not first scruple, then take, and lastly break; but I admire such a sudden Change, for your Fanaticks were turned mighty loyal Gentlemen before I parted hence.

Will.

Will. You might have admired justly if it had been otherways. Who thinks strange that a Pick-pocket runs away with your Money when you trust him? or that an old Rook cheats a young Country Squire? I'll tell thee, Man, to believe a Presbyterian Protestation, is as much as to think a Man cannot cheat, because he lies. I'm resolv'd ne'er to trust a Fanatick till I get him on his Chair of Verity, the Stone i'the Grass-market; the Villain is then tempted to tell something of the Truth; that is to say, that he dies a Rogue and a Rebel.

Fra. — Tell me fincerely, Will, What think'st thou of the State of the Nation? My Concern about some Friends interested makes me inquisitive.

Will. ——Gad 'tis a most monstrous, hideous Body politick; I have neither Time nor Rhetorick to describe it; you may have an Abridgment of it by conversing with the People in Town; a Man who had walked betwixt the Strait-bow and the Cross, wou'd imagine, by their Converse, he had marched out of King William's Territories to King James's. ——They have both their Kingdoms in this Town, i'faith; only with this Difference, King James domineers in the Taverns, and King William at the Council-table.

Fra. That must oblige a Man to an Italian Strictness in Conversation.

Will. In that you may do as you lift; for I affure you Sincerity is a Quality as much out of Fashion as it is improsperous; gad you'd swear it had been abdicated, in the late Convention, with King James, and declared a Rebel to the State. For my own part, I'm forc'd to turn Tory; for a Man can hardly get a good Comerade, or a Woman of Wit and Discretion on the other Side on't. Among our Whigs, a Man that hath as much Sense as wou'd keep him from being disinherited of his Father's Fortune, is thought a Statesman.

Fra.

Fr

have

Amb

D

with forn

heh

in s

Dea

Fat

Fre

Co

Re

da

F

ti

fu

h

n

t

k

F

d been pocket him! quire!

cheat, a Fa-

emptfay, ink'ft

about hide-hetoment n; a

had King

King

rict-I af-

Fahad ling my

can Wit our ou'd

ra.

or-

Fra. Pox on the Rascals! Then I'm resolv'd to have nothing to do with them: Methinks 'tis a mean Ambition for a Man to be the best of his Company.

Enter Drawer.

Draw. There's one Mr. Novel desires to speak with you, Gentlemen.

Fra. Bid him come forward; he can perhaps inform me about my Friends in the Country.

Enter Novel.

Fra. 1 am glad to fee you well: How doth my

Nov. —— And how many Men hath the King of

Fra. I aik thee, Man, how all my Friends i' the

Nov. Nay, for Reports, we have had fuch strange Reports about the Half-moon of Baclemont, and that damn'd Portuguese Skipper—

Fra. The Devil take thee for a damn'd eternal Fool, [Aside.] Wilt thou resolve me as to my Relations i' the Country, and I shall give thee thy Bellyful of that afterward.

Mov. Nay, but the Marshal Boussers, how doth he? _____ If thou hadst not come, my five Guineas _____

Fra. — Wou'd I had paid four of 'em if thou wou'dst answer me. When did you see my Friends i' the Country!

Nov. Foh! Country! fay you; I'd have you know, Sir, I went not to the Country fince the Revolution; I'd fooner go to Purgatory. Why? 2 Man can have no more certain Intelligence in the Country, than good Liquor; their News are as fophisticated as their Wine, i'gad. But still as touthing Mons?

Fra.

Fra. Then I'll tell you; the Sum of it is, that upon the 28th of March it was surrendered.

Nov. And all the Garrison put to the Edge of the discov

Sword, were they not?

Fra. That had been pretty indeed! Faith, fully as ill as fighting, and the Articles of Peace in the General's Pocket.

Nov. There's an honest Fellow can inform me about it.

[Exit Novel.

Enter Drawer.

Draw. — I have been so plagu'd keeping a Gentleman out of your Company, I have told him a thousand Lies, but nothing will serve his Turn. — There he comes; he calls himself Mr. Abednego Vifioner. —

Enter Visioner.

Vis. Sir, I have not the Honour of your Acquaintance; I remember I was once in Company with your Father; but I knew his Minister, sweet Mr. Violent, wonderfully well——Our Moderator, you know, Sir, Mr. Hugh, Sir, bid me put up some Interrogatories about the King's Affairs abroad.

Fra. Sir, I alk your Pardon; I neither know your Moderator, Mr. Hugh, nor the King's Affairs a-road.

Vif. The Moderator of the General Assembly, Sir!—Not that I mean it as a Title of Dignity, for the Place you know is ambulatory: But, no doubt, Sir, you can inform me if there be any Thing—I fay, Sir, you can resolve me, if the King is to be conjunct Emperor or not—

Re-enter Novel.

Now. ——Conjunct, fay you!——Demme, he'll be fole Emperor or nothing: I'll pawn my Ears he'll be at the Gates of Vienna ere a Month.

Vif. Sir, I alk your Pardon; I believe he'll be at the Gates of Paris first.

Nov. Yes, I know he is already at Versailles.

Will.

Wi

Vi

King

meani

Enem

think happe

tertio

preve

Ver/

Wel

Con

Coa

hoo

Mar

Kin

hin

the

Ad

W

'ti

P

n

0

F

i

V

No

take.

, that

fully in the me alovel. ing a nim a

Viain-

with Mr. you In-

our 1 2-

dy, ty, no

ng ng

e, rs at 1.

Will. These two Gentlemen are in a mutual Mistake. We must keep them there, i'faith; for if they of the discover one another, they'll put Fire in the House. To Frank afide.

> Vif. - Well, Sir! But think you, will our King have his Court at Verfailles or at London, Still meaning, you know, after he has vanquished all his Enemies, you understand me?

Yet, when I Nov. Why not at London? think better on't, if he stays at Versailles, and if there happen another Revolution, they will not have Defertion to lay to his Charge — Besides, it would prevent frequent Changes in Court; gad a Treasurer might make himfelf rich ere a Chancellor went to Versailles and back again to decourt him. -Well, I'm fatisfied, let it be at Versailles.

Vis. ---- Nay, there would be this farther Convenience in't: You know my Lord wants a Coach, now he may get an Anstruther Bark, and hoope o'er to Versailles; but the Moderator, poor Man, it would be too far a Voyage for him.

Nov. What a Devil; would he venture to fee the King?

Vis. Troth, I think it wou'd e'en be too far for him to venture.

Nov. Gad I dont't question but he wou'd tho'. If there were a new Indulgence, we should have a new Address, i'faith.

Will. - Damn the Fools, 'twill out. [ Aside.

Vis. I'm fure the King will never indulge those whom he knows to be Enemies to his Government; 'tis true the Queen's a little more heretical.

Nov. That's to fay, she's a little more addicted to Popery.

Vis. Indeed, Sir, you say right, for I can call it no other Thing: I see you understand Matters, as one wou'd fay. Here's your Health. But that Church of England, I hope in God to fee it ruined.

Nov. If it shou'd, their Clergy are to be blam'd twist -Gad these Bishops of England are a Parcel of San odd Fellows, that wou'd part with Heaven fooner than their Benefices.

Vis. A rare Gentleman this! - [Aside.] But have you heard nothing of King James being ill?

Nov. If it be fo, some People may be forry.

Vis. The Prince, you mean; yet, I can hardly call him a Prince, being fet up to defraud our King of his just Right.

Nov. ---- And for that he deferves not the Name of a Prince; Prince! a mere Robber and Usurper, Vif. No, I won't fay that, the poor Babe had no Blame.

Nov. - That's most certain. But to defraud a poor innocent Child of its just Right.

Vif. What Child?

Nov. The Prince of Wales, i'gad! what other? Vif. Prince of Wales! a shitten Bastard, a mere Impostor.

Nov. Are you there, you rotten Fanatick, you! -I might have known you by your fiend-like Come, here's King James's Health to you;

drink it, or I'll be with the Cat's Guts of you.-[Drinks.

Steale

bly o

a poo

of M Vi

N

V nor !

the I

our N

ers

no ! on S

fay,

1

V

has To

the

Th

Le

ha

P

ca

al

15

21 L

Vis. Here's King William's to you. See who dares refuse it.

Will. Sit down, Gentlemen; no Quarrels here.

Nov. King Willie! that Monky in royal Robes, that Creature of the giddy Rabble, a blazing Star, generated of a Dutch Fog, which will go away in Smoke.

Vis. King James! a mere empty Title, by the Grace of God King of great Limrick, Athlone and Galway, a Deferter, a Runaway, the French King's first Pensioner of State.

Nov. King Willie! that Bully of twenty or thirty German Lairds, Guardian of the Protestant League 'twixt

] But

hardly King

Name urper, ad no

aud a

er? mere ou! -like ou;

nks. vho

es, tar, in the ind g's

ty ue. xt

blam'd twixt the Pope, Emperor, King of Spain and Duke arcel of Savoy, General of the most high and potent Cowsooner Stealers of Inskilling, and President of an Assembly of Madmen in this ancient Kingdom of Scotland! a poor mean Thing, within these two Months March of Mifery.

Vif. That's of King James and his Army.

Nov. Dost thou know thy own State Creed, and the Ministers Litany, the English Gazette?

Vis. I'd have you know, Sir, we use neither Creed nor Litany, more than carnal Sense and Reason, in our Religion.

'Tis a damn'd Lie, for your Ministers Prayers are stuff'd with the Gazette; and I believe for no other Reason they have shut up the Coffeehouses on Sunday, but lest Men should know what they can fay, and fo stay from Church.

Vis. Well, but what of the Gazette?

Nov. Mons is ta'en, i'gad.

Vis. That's a Mistake; 'tis the Garrison of Mons has ta'en the French, and detains them within the Town, and compels them to keep Garrison for them there.

Nov. O God! such a notorious Forgery -The Baltick Kings have deserted the Protestant League. That's not true either, I'll warrant.

Vis. 'Tis no Matter, for in their Stead we are to have the King of Morocco, the King of Mogul, and Prester-John, who is a Presbyterian, i'faith; and I cannot tell how many grand Czars and Dukes, and all that .- And I'll tell you more, the French Fleet is frozen in at Brest, and cannot get out this Year.

Nov. All damn'd fanatick Lies, i'gad.

Vis. I'll warrant my Lord's Man's of Struther-dikes. and Lord Annandale's Vision of three Heads, are all Lies, I'll warrant. These Tories will believe nothing.

Nov. — And these Fanaticks believe every thing. But I'll teach you to speak Truth, you fil-[Gives him a Box on the Ear. ly Rogue. V1/.

Vif. I think thou art the Messenger of Satan fent if he p to buffet me: Well, I'll mind you the next Rab Mother bling. [Runs off, Novel chacing him. Coner

Will. We've got a Bottle, now we'll to Church, where, perhaps, we may meet with a Wench. [71 Incere Frank. Exeunt. by.

ACT I. SCENE

The old Lady's Lodging.

Mr. Wordie discovered sitting by Mrs. Rachel, his Hand about her Neck, Bible in their Hands, the Old Lady walking beside.

Old La. I Ndeed, Mass James, I hope she will learn to compone Scripture, will she not?

The Lady turns the other Way. Word. She will-[He kiffes Rachel.] be able to understand the most hidden Mysteries --- in a short -Time, in these Words, There be three Things considerable.

Rach. So--three Things, I understand that. Old La. Bleffed be God, Mass James, that sent you to my House, great was the Scarcity of Family-exercise we laboured under. [Mass James rises and stands when the Lady speaks.] But I hope shortly my Daughter Rachel (hall understand and practise it as well- - Sit down Mass James.

Rach. No, Mother, he exerciseth best standing;

'tis more convenient, I think.

Old La. But'tis wearisom for Mass James... Word. No, Madam, I give o'er in Time.

Old La. I know, such is the Frailty of her Nature, the will weary first.

Rach. Indeed no, Mother; Mass James can tell I love it very well; I could hear him about the three Things considerable four and twenty Hours,

Old

Wor Rai rown

Exit by a hould We while Ra three ber t

> W Case thin the Mor wic

> > you

, I p

you

and La TI

> ma fe in ni 11

m an fent if he pleased. But much exercising makes him dry, t Rab. Mother; and he's forced to give over, God knows, g him. sooner than I wish, many a Time.

hurch, Old La. Teach her, Mass James, to drink in the [To fincere Milk of the Word, that she may grow therexeunt. by.

I.

, his

earn

Tay.

to ort

ngs

at.

ent

niles.

ly

as

;

Word. In troth she's a very pliable Scholar.

Rach. The Truth is, Mother, I know myfelf grown by it these six Months by-past extremely. [Exit Old Lady] My Petticoat will hardly meet by a Quarter. He has so used me to it, I fear I should hardly live without it. [Aside.

Word. How gravely look'd I, my Dear, all the while ?

Rach. You outdid me not there, more than at the three Things considerable.——I was at your chamber this Morning, but you was gone out. [They kiss.

Word. I was with Mr. Solomon, and told him the Case. He bids us be of good Cheer, and fear nothing, seeing he is sure the old Lady will consent to the Match, and give it out we were married six Months ago, rather than open the Mouths of the wicked, debauch'd Malignants, by the Scandal of your being with Child.

Rach. And I hope the General Assembly will give you a Call ?

Word. Never doubt that, I can get a Dozen when I please. — What Time shall we meet to-night?

Rach. I'll come to your Chamber 'twixt twelve and one—My two wanton Cousins, Violetta and Laura, begin, I fear, to suspect my being with Child. They wou'd be glad of this to twit me with; for many a fair Lecture I have read them against the scandalous Custom of speaking with Men, and looking over the Windows at them.

Word. They shall know nothing of it.——We must now part, for I must go hear what the Committee does to-day.——So expects you according to your Promise.

[They kiss.]

Rach.

Rach. You never knew me fail you; you know ever hated lying; it is a most abominable Sin.

Word. Indeed it is a damnable Sin.

Rach. But mum—There comes my two Coufing Bell.

Vio. Methinks, Mr. Wordie, you keep my Couse under too strict Discipline; she has quite lost he Complexion of late, and seems to be so taken with your Exercise, that she cannot sleep in the Night.

Word. Verily, Madam, your Cousin, Mrs. Rachel, may be a Pattern; for I am always exhorting her to watch and pray, and it seems she's very observant—But e'en God-be with you.

[Exit. Wordie.

Lau. Well, Cousin, my Sister and I come to see if you will go hear Mr. Solomon preach to-day.

Rach. It were a Sin to flight the golden Opportunity of hearing so precious a Man. I'll go make myself ready. [Exit. Rachel.

Lau. Well, this Congress is broke up. Faith methinks my Cousin Rachel not nice on't, when she trucks up with this Jure divino. He promiseth not much, I'm fure.

Vio. But he performs better, else Rachel would have nothing to do with him.—But, Sister, what think you of our Conversation of Life at our godly Aunt's Home? We see nobody but old fanatick Ladies and Whig Ministers; we hear nothing but long Prayers and senseless tedious Lectures and Sermons, save sometimes, for our Diversion, we read The Call to the Unconverted, Tormenting Tophet, and such prosound Pieces, that, i'faith, I understand no more than our old Aunt hears them, when they are read no louder than the Bellman cries.

Lau. Methinks The Lady's Calling would fuit us better.—But, i'faith, Sister, if the Whigs be the Saints, I'll take their Communion out of my Creed, for I'll believe nothing I hate.

Vio. I'll be rid of this impertinent, religious, nonfenfical Clatter by the first Conveniency, I assure you. Lau.

made a as unbe Bell.

Lau.

A

Moder Sol ride

his

Mod.

l have leave greatest F

Goo nan Fac

Ho Me and in

1

th bl y

11

S

SCOTCH REFORMATION.

13.

Lau. ____And, if I do not the same, may I be made a Nun; a thing as cross to my Inclinations, as unbefitting my Complexion. - But I hear the ousing Bell. Come, let us go. Exeunt.

ACT I. SCENE

A Church. The Committee debating.

Moderator, Mr. Salathiel, Mr. Turbulent, Mr. Solomon, Mr. Covenant Plain-dealer, Lord Whigridden, Ruling Elder, Lord Huffy with a Whip in his Hand.

Mod. T See many malignant Spies here to-day; they are come for Ill and not for Good. I have feen the Day when no malignant Eye got leave to look on the Work of the Lord. The greatest Nobles in the Nation thought it their greatest Honour to stand at the Door of the House of God, with drawn Swords, to keep out the Malignants, whom they knew by the first Glisk of their Faces.

__'Tis better to be a Door-keeper in the Turb. -House of God, than dwell in the Tents of wicked Men. I think 'tis both their Honour and Duty, and we should command the Nobles of our Time, in the Name of Christ our Master, to do the like.

Starts up Lord Huffy, and clacks his Whip. L. Huff. Moderator, fince I am not thought worthy to be a Member of this learned and godly Affembly, I here offer myself with my Whip, to be one of your noble Guards at the Door, and beg you to believe, that there is no Title with which I am dignified, I would be prouder of, than that of being one of the Scourges of the Lord.— [Clacks his Whip again.

Mod. My Lord, we cannot but commend your Zeal, for I am fure there is none amongst all our know

Couli oft he n with ht.

Cachel, her to antordie. to see ppormake achel. n men she not ould w hat odly atick but

Serread and

d no

are t us the

eed, on-

Qu. alle. Nobles fitter to scourge the Malignants out of the House of God———But to our Work, Brethren There's two Sorts of People who have taken their Hands from the Work of the Lord: The first is the Tories, who never put their Hands to it; the second is the Court Party: So we poor Men maune'en put our Shoulders to't, and take a good Lift of the Cause of Christ; for I assure you it will never break one of your Backs.

Cov. 'Tis your own Cause, and your own Interest;

ay, for footh is it.

Mod. Brethren, I would fain ken what ye would do.

Turb. Why, Moderator, I think it fit we have a Thanksgiving for the Deseat of the Duke of Savoy.

Sal. Rather a Fast; for he was one of the Confe-derates Side.

Mod. I think rather Brother Turbulent has the right End of the String; for he was but a Burden to the Confederates; and God's Judgments came upon him for persecuting the poor Protestants.

Cov. Indeed, Moderator, he's as good a Protestant as King William.

Mod. Outs, Brother Govenant, hold your Tongue of that; we will not be too severe; we will not rip up old Sores.—Brethren, [All the Committee speaks together, some for a Fast, and some for a Thanksgiving] Let us pray to drown the Noise, and quiet our Spirits.

Cov. What needs all this fool Praying?

Mod. prays. Our Minds are difordered, we do not ken what we are doing or faying; Lord, give us Grace, or thou shalt not get Glory, and see wha will win at that.—Now since, by his Providence, the Din's done, I would propose a Dilemma, I mean an Alternative, whether ye will plant the Church of Scotland or the Church of England sirst.

Turb. Truly, Moderator, I think Charity should begin at Home.

Sal.

Sa

irst

Mini

Gos

all c foon

Men

prov

nora

Beli

and

Sal

you

lat

Le

go

Pe

CI

PI

S

h

L

b

a

i

h

1

Sal. Of a Truth, Moderator, I think you should first plant the Church of England, for there's no Ministers there, and we have a Call to preach the Gospel through the whole World. That Place is all overgrown with Briers and Thorns, and they'll soon o'ergang Scotland too, except we send able Men to tread them out. You know I wrote a Book proving that Kingdom guilty of Scandal, Error, Ignorance, Superstition and Will-worship.

Besides, many of them have a spiritual Blindness, and a pastoral Relation to some of us.

Mod. Will the Folks of England call you, Mr.

Salathiel, or will you go back?

of th

ethren

is the

the fe

maun

Lift of

never ereft;

would nave a avoy.

onfe-

the

urden

e up-

Stant 💹

ngue

t rip

eaks

giv-

our

not us

wha

ovi-

ma,

the

ſŧ.

uld

Sal.

Sal. ___ I will do ___ my Duty, Moderator.

Mod. I think they will neither call you, nor will you be the Fool to go back again.

Cov. What needs all this Pother about Mr. Salathiel's going back? They have got a good enough Lend of him already: I know likeways he dares not go back; for there's an Order from a Justice of Peace to apprehend him if they can catch him.

Sol. Tho' I am not a Member of this Meeting of Christ's Kirk ____ From a Corner. ] yet I am a privy Member: I am concerned for the Kirk of Scotland, that pure Virgin, which is altogether lovely, who hath Doves Eyes within her Locks, her Lips are like Threads of Scarlet, her Speech is comely; her pouting Breafts are like two young Roes that are Twins, and feed among the Lilies; her Navel is like a round Goblet, and wanteth not Liquor; her Belly is a Heap of Wheat fet about with Lilies : She hath been deflower'd thefe twenty-eight Years by the Curates: I intreat you then, Brethren, for the Mercies of Christ, get able Men, with Soul-refreshing and in-bearing Gifts, to do Duty to her, and to dress her seasonably and abundantly. Ay, ay, forfooth-

Turb. ____Moderator_____

Sol. ——Fornication——

Cov. Fornication with the Virgin; that's as ill as the Curates hobbling on the Whore of Babylon, and begetting fourteen Blackbirds, to wit, the Pre-lates—No more about that.

R. Eld. Cleense out the Keerates, that the Gospel may be preached; let that be the first deene;

that's the Wark of the Lord.

[One knocks at the Door, Officer opens. Enter a Webster. L.

own

Plan

Tis

2dly

Tis

at;

and

telt

the

fpe

tha

Z

ŀ

t

I

I

Web. My Lord Moderator.

Mod. Awa—with these proud prelatick Titles! call me, Brother Moderator, in the Lord Jesus.

Web. Well then, my Lord, Brother Moderator in the Lord Jesus, I have brought a Covenant, from our own Folks in St. Andrews, to make the worthy Earl a ruling Elder.

Mod. Brother, you should call that Paper a Commission.

Web. Covenant or Commission, all's one, but I think the Word Covenant sounds best; e'en call it what you please, for you're Book-lear'd.

Mod. My Lord, by his Providence, we have got a Commission from the zealous Websters, Sutors, and godly Women in St. Andrews, for your Lordship to represent them in this Judicatory; 'tis gravaminous for us to have wanted you so long, e'en give's your Opinion about what we are speaking.

L. Whig. I have done as good Service to this honourable Judicatory as any Man living, by ruining and rabbling the Curates. I have managed the whole Civil Interest with much Wisdom; yet, as Nehemiah saith, it requireth more to be an Office-bearer in the House of God; therefore I desire you wou'd pray for me six Months without ceasing, that I may be sit for this great Work.

Mod. 'Tis not dishonourable; e'en seek God's Blessing; he never gave a Burden, but he sitted the Back for bearing of it.

L. Whig.

as ill abylon, e Pre-

eene;

itles!

Earl

om-

out I

and thip mive's

ho-

the for d's he

ig.

L. Whig. Though I be conscious to myself of my own Imbecillity, yet I shall offer three Things about Plantations, the Thing ye were speaking of. 1st, 'Tis the only Time now to delve, in order to plantadly, 'Tis the sittest Month now to plantadly,' Tis the sittest Time of the foresaid Month to plantadly. Mod. My Lord, we know not what you wou'd be at; we were speaking about Plantations of Kirks, and you speak about planting of Trees and Hedges.

L. Whig. The Matter is the same, for 'tis the fittest Time to delve out the Curates by the Spade of the Spirit.

Mod. Let us adjourn now till Afternoon, and fpeak about these things then, at more Length, at that Time when we meet again. [Scene closeth.

ACT. II. SCENE I.

A Chamber.

Lord Huffy in his Night-gown.

Enter Boy.

Boy. DEVIL take me, my Lord—if there be not a whole Battalia of Boatmen, Hirers and Fiddlers, who have belieged the House; I hardly escaped with my Life to tell you.

L. Huff. You Dog! Whore's Son! must I be peftered with you too, you Rascal?

Boy. Good faith, my Lord, it is not best your Lordship make a Civil War within, when the Enemy threatens us without; they'll be hard enough for us both; and, besides, we are far from the Guard.

L. Huff. You Villain, go get me a Whip———— [Boy brings a Whip, Huffy throws it at the Boy.] You damn'd Rascal, did I not break that Whip on the D 2 Lady

Lady t'other Day? ——Get me the great Whip. [My Lord appears arm'd with his Whip, Boatmen, Hirers, and Fiddlers thronging on him.] What wou'd you fay, you Villains?

Boatmen. We wou'd have our Money.

Years, and the De'il take me, my Lord, if e'er I was so guided by ony Man, either gentle or semple. How shall poor Men live, when you, and the like of you, will not give us our Money, but abuses us like Dogs this gate?

L. Huff. This to me, you Villain!

[Offers to beat him.

please

God

eight

Suto

Lord

had a

to b

The

not lin

not

of

on-

TI

ol

n

b

1

L

2 Boat. God damn me, my Lord, if we'll be so psed; aff Hands is fair Play, as John Moncur said to the De'il: Be my Saul, my Lord, an' your Head were as white as Willie Milne's Beard, I'll ha' my Fraught, that I will.

Boat. God nar my Boat were i' the Bottom of the Sea if I be not paid——What needs all this? I ferved the Duke of Rothes, (his Saul praise God) the Earl Marshal and my Lord Dundee; God nor the De'il blaw me i' the Air, if e'er ane of them offered the like to me fince e'er I cross'd Burntisland Water, or God nor it be my hindmost——

L. Huff. Get ye gone, ye Dogs, or else I'll slash

you.

4 Boat. What needs all this? Where was a' this Slashing at Gillicrankie?

L. Huff. Call the Guard.

Tis muckle to your Lordship's Credit to abuse a poor Lad this Way! [Shews his Head.] If you will not pay my Horse, at least pay the Plaister for my Head. L. Huff You damn'd Rascal, you shall get the Stocks for offering such a Horse to a Nobleman.

2 Hir. Rascal here, Rascal there, I'll have my Money. 'Tis a Shame to abuse any poor Things Horse, that has no other Way to win their Living by.

3 Hir.

Vhip. tmen, wou'd

fteen 'er I mple. ke of s like him, be fo faid Head my

m of his?
God)
I nor flash

land

this

poor not lead.

my ings by.

glease; he's lying at the Dike-side; 'twixt me and God I paid sifty Pound of good Siller for him, not eight Days ago—Noblemen! The De'il made Sutors Seamen. We have got so many Earls and Lords now, i' the De'il's Name, God nor Belzebub had a Back-burden of them.

L. Huff. — Villains! Rascals! — O God! to be so abused! Fly for half a Dozen of Men——— What would you say, Sir?

Fid. God bless your Lordship, I believe it was not willingly your Lordship did it [Shews his Nose.—But look on our Instruments; there's a Violin broke just at the Neck—all the Town will not mend, or put her right again; there's the Back of an old Bass Viol, as good as ever Man laid Bow on—Look you, my Lord.

L. Huff. Why the De'il wou'd you not play the Tune I defired?

Fid. Indeed, my Lord, we knew it not.

L. Huff. Must I give Money, you caterwauling, obstreperous Villains, Baboons, to People that cannot play? Go, all of ye.

All. — We'll know for what we came first.

L. Huff. Take you here your Freight, ye Dogs.

Boat. Ay, but what for cutting the Cable, and for breaking the great Pump?

L. Huff. Take you there-What must you have, you Rogues !

Hir. You know, my Lord, there is so much for

L. Huff. What, you Dog, your Horse !

Hir. God damn him, beis me, that looks after him again; that's a good ane indeed ——Besides the breaking of the great Manger and my own Head; a Baillie would have allowed me four Pound of Assythment besides the Fine.

L. Huff. Come to me afterwards, Sir, and ye shall get a Bill on the Minister of Wemysi's Stipend.

D 3

Fid.

Fid. My Lord, mind us now; you fee my Now here—and my Sunday's Cravat, worth twenty Pence, spoiled with the Claret in the Glass ye three at me; you see our Fiddles are useles; the poor blind Harper, your Lordship had a Sling at him too

L. Huff. Damn your Heads and your Instruments they're so confoundedly tender — take you there.

[Exeunt Boatmen, Hirers and Fiddler.

Fid. God bless your Lordship and all your hobk

L. Huff. Boy, henceforth, you Dog, I ordain you to learn to cure Wounds, and carry a Box of Plaisters along with you, and not put me to all this needless Expence.—Get twenty Elns of Whipcord, Sirrah; I have not a whole one in my Custody

Boy. Indeed 'tis no Wonder, your Lordship uses them so unmercifully.

ACT II. SCENE II.

A Church.

Mr. Solomon absolving a Fornicatrix: The (looking on) Congregation: Will and Frank sitting by Viofetta and Laura; Old Lady and Mrs. Rachel near by.

Mr. Sol. O The Wickedness of Man's Heart!

For once or twice to be surprised with Temptation is no Wonder; but for one of the People of God to open the Mouths of the Wicked, and to wallow like a filthy Swine so long in the filthy Sin of Fornication, Oh! it should be for a Lamentation——Say, what was it tempted thee, Woman, to ly so long in the foul Fact?

Forn. Ah, Sir! when once this filthy abominable Flesh of mine had rebell'd against the Spirit, and the Devil had gotten Possession of it, what car'd I for it?

I let

I le

WO

He

Boo

wit

to der

ha i'

Wa

lik

ho

.. co

th

tl

1

like

Het him do with it what he pleased; it was not worth the keeping any longer: But I preferved my Heart clean to my bleffed Maker.

No

went threv

poor n too

nents

ere.

ddler. noble

ordain

OX O

this Vhip-

Mody

ufes

cunt.

oking

Vio-

achel

art!

rifed

the

ked,

e fil-

La-

hee,

able

the

it ? let

Will. Fair Creature, wou'd I had Poffession of thy Body ! To Violetta.

Vio. If you had, Sir, I fhould wish you dealt more like a Gentleman, than it feems the Devil hath done with this poor Girl; after you had used it a while, to give it up again.

Will. Why not, if you were so impertinent as to demand it? ____ Mistress. ___ Well, this is a happy Rencounter; this is a handsome Creature. i' faith. - [Mrs. Rachel looks and frowns; and she warns Will. by Pinching, to forbear.] And I find I am like the Devil, indeed; I have a vast appetite for holy Flesh --- But I see I have that Monster to conquer ere I catch my golden Fleece. ---- Well, I think I have fallen on a Stratagem in Love was never practifed before. [Will. takes the Bible, and throws up a Passage to Violetta, who reads.

Vio. " Behold, thou art fair, my Love!"

Fra. I'm as well stated here as yourself; I intreat thee shew me a Place to throw up to this Lady; I vow fhe's young and pretty.

Will. Hift, Fool, thou canst not act this. letta points a Place to Will. he reads. ] " O that thou " wert as my Brother, who fucked the Breafts of my " Mother! when I should find thee without, I should " lead thee, and bring thee into my Mother's House." Old La. Well, I wish all the Nebuchadnezzars and Bel/hazzars of the Age were like this young Gentle-

The Congregation dismisseth; Will. offers to convoy the Old Lady home; they stand and discourse: Frank goes away in the Growd.

Vio. But what may be the Sense of the eighth

Chapter of the Song of Solomon?

Will. The best Commentators say that Solomon alludes to the Metaphor of a Man and his Mistres: and none being permitted among the Jews to converse (by strict Mothers) with their Daughters, save Brothers, and such near Relations, the Bride wisheth her Gallant were as her Brother, that she might converse familiarly with him; but since that could not be, she was forced to go out and seek him in the Fields, and the Town-guard met her, and maltreated her.

Old La. That Sense is very ingenuous, and there may be several Uses of Instruction and Consolation drawn from it.

Will. "Come, my Beloved, let us walk in the "Fields, let us lodge in the Villages." The fame Metaphor still. The Kirk not having the Liberty of bringing her Servant to her Mother's House, refolved to meet him in the Villages, such as the Canongate, in respect of Edinburgh; and the Vineyeard, such as my Lady Murray's Yeards, to use a homely Comparison.

Old La. A wondrous young Man this!

Rach. He is so indeed—But, I say, you'll do well to take your Niece out of his Way.——

Well, if this be not a Plot, then

Old. La. Then hold your Peace, you; I could hear that Gentleman dispone Scripture all the Day long; he illustrates every thing so well by homely and familiar Comparisons, and applies it to our present Condition so naturally, that—

Rach. — That he will debauch your Niece,

no more but that.

Old La. No Rest, Mistress, for your impious Interruptions! thou art yet in the Gall of Bitterness, for I see thou hast an Aversion to edifying Discourses—— Say on, Sir.

Will. The eighth Chapter, towards the Close: Thou that dwellest in the Gardens, cause me to " hear thy Voice."

Vio. That's still alluding to the Metaphor of a Gallant, who by some Signs warns his Mistress to make has b nake

early

row

our I

01

by t

righ a li herf vide

of the 1

on

2

Ser

a

in pr

to

m

early in the former Chapter; that is to fay, to-morrow by Six o'Clock-Make hafte to accomplish our Loves.

Old La. Thou art a hopeful Girl; I hope God has bleft my Pains on thee.

Vio. - But I have a fittle Sifter, which hath no Breafts-

Will. Most Interpreters understand the Gentiles

by that.

fave

wishnight

could

m in mal-

there

tion

the fame

perty re-

Ca-

lineile a chel.

ou'll

ould Day

me-

our iece,

ter-

for

ose:

e-to

of a

to ake

Vio. Just like this Sister of mine here, whom you know, Aunt, we had great Difficulty to bring to the right Way? This is the same Metaphor carried on a little farther. A Woman, after the has bestow'd herself, wou'd give her Gallant Command to provide for her Sifter.

Will. Why, truly this is the practical Meaning of the Words: Methinks it were but reasonable she should be concerned that the poor Gentile Sifter should be provided.

Enter Lady's Maid.

Maid. Mr. Solomon and Mr. Covenant are waiting on your Ladyship.

Will. I must be gone then [Aside.] - Your Servant, Madam.

Old La. I must wait upon the Ministers-Your Servant, Sir. [Exit Old Lady, Rachel and Laura.

Will to Vio. Madam, I hope you will be so much a Christian, as to obey the Word of Prophecy tomorrow at Six; gad 'twere a Pity an Intrigue begun in Doctrine should not be brought to Use.

Vio. Good Sir, my Divinity is mere Speculation:

I believe you think I had an ill Meaning?

Will. No, faith; but 'tis fit you converse with practical Pieces sometimes; besides, the Decorum requires you should practife what you preach; and for your little Sifter, my Comerade, who fat next me in the Church, has as good Breafts and Back both, for her, as any in Town, and will be glad to lead the straying Sister in the right Way.

Vio. Well, Sir, I'll try to obey for once-[She's going and smiling on him.] The Will of the Lord be done.

Will. And, if I fail thee, may I turn Eunuch .-This is the prettieft Way of courting a Presbyterian Lady's Sifter, or Niece, (gad I know not what she is yet) that I ever heard of: Let me be hang'd but I shall love the Bible the better for it as long as ! live: But I'll follow her at a Distance, that I may and her Lodgings; then I'll foon know what the is. Exit after her.

ACT SCENE II.

A Church. The Committee.

Lord Whigridden, Moderator, Mr. Covenant, Mr. Salathiel, Mr. Solomon, Ruling-Elder, Clerk.

Mod. D Rethren, it has pleased God, of his good Pleasure, to allow us another Opportunity to shew our Zeal in his Work. Well, call in the Curate with his Petition, and dispatch him; but let us first resolve what Answer to give.

Sol. Refolve, Moderator, to grant them nothing at all; for give them an Inch, and they'll take a Span.

R. Eld. I jeedge it guid, and for Sekeerity of the Protestant Religion, that nae Keerate get Leave to fet his Fitt within this Bigging.

Mod. Mr. Salathiel, what fay you?

Sal. Bona certe, Moderator, if you have a mind to hear what he has to fay, 'tis best to call him in; but, if otherways, I think it is e'en best he be not call'd in. Turb.

Tur

within us : "

Let us

of Re

offend

him.

R.

Mo

R.

Mo

Sh

drefs defiri on w

Glerk and ; M

give

thre Advi

L

at th

rash

an

Min

appo

faid hop

you

rate

or I

pra

the lad to Turb. I say, Moderator, if he beis admitted of the terian

'd but g as l

he is.

r her.

II.

Mr.

ortu-

all in

but

k.

within these Walls, let him not come near any of s: "Touch not the unholy Thing, faith the Lord!" Let us not falute him, or give him any Testimony of Respect or Favour.

R. Eld. - Or Jeestice, Moderator, for it would

at the offend Guid.

Mod. Well, shall we call him, that he may come

R. Eld. Yes, but see the Doors be nae apened to Mod. Officer, call in Mr. Shittle. Officer calls. Enter Mr. Shittle.

Shitt. Moderator, I bring you a Petition and Address from my Brethren of the Episcopal Persuasion. defiring it may be instantly read and answered; upon which I take Instruments. [Throws Money to the Glerk, who takes out his Spectucles, looks on the Money. and puts it up.

Mod. We shall just now call you again, Sir, and give you your Answer .- [Exit Shittle.] Now, Brethren, what shall be done? Now, my Lord, your good Advice at this Juncture.

L. Whig. If I should add to what has been said at this Time upon this Subject, it would be like the rash Touch of a Pencil upon a compleat Picture by an unskilful Hand. --- Curates not being the Ministers of Christ, 'tis fit there be a Sub-committee appointed to draw up Articles against that Petition.

Turb. My Lord, there has been nothing at all faid upon the Subject before, at this Time, and I hope you will not answer it before it be read, will you ?

All the Committee cry, A Vote! a Vote! Moderator, whether it should be answered ere it be read, or read ere it be answered.

Mod. That our Spirits may be composed, let us pray --- Heh --- hem --- O Lord, who art the Author and Finisher of our Disorders; who directs

ake a f the thing

ve to mind in; not

Turb.

rects us in all our Confusions to do thy holy Will, fettle our Spirits, and e'en give us thy best Advice for thy own Work, or it will go the war on.

the l

mem

pose

are :

wha

muc

to it hear

of .

as i

Ob

or

for ple

Co

be yo

ph

25

sh

C

tl

e

k

Cov. Moderator, e'en read a Line o't quietly, to fee what they would have.

Clerk reads. "To the Ministers, and others, who have Power by Law to constitute Church-Judica- tures, the humble Petition of the Ministers of the " Episcopal Persuasion."

Mod. Stop there, Clerk; we'll read no more.

Turb. We will not hear it, Moderator: They call us not Ministers of Christ.

Cov. I believe they think us Ministers of Iniquity. Sal. And besides, they say, Power constituted by Law; I hope there is none here that thinks he's constituted by Law.

Turb. Can the Law constitute Judges of Christ's Kirk? No; and they call themselves Ministers too, and of the Episcopal Persuasion; we'll give no Favour to any such People; we'll root out the Canaanites, and leave not one of them in the Land.

R. Eld. Indeed we fuid make an Act of Transportability, ordaining the Civil Magistrate to banish them out of the Kingdom, and beyond the Line.

Mod. Call in the Curate. [Officer calls] -

We will have nothing to do with your Petition, Sir, take it to you again; we'll give our Reasons for our Refusal afterwards.

Mr. Shitt. Moderator, we are clear in our Conficiences to join with you in purging the Kirk of all scandalous, heretical and negligent Ministers of all Sorts, and chiefly of all such of our Persuasion as resulte to own your Authority; for we acknowledge your Power de fasto over us, and all Power is of God, that's certain; for it is one of the new thirtynine Articles: But consider it is not long since we were in the Possession of the Power; God pulls down one and sets up another. The Inclinations of the

who udicaof the

Will,

ice for

quity.
d by con-

ranf-

too,

Sir,

f all f all as edge

s of rtywe

ulls s of the the People are very changeable, and let that be a memento mori to you, Moderator: Besides, we propose very reasonable Terms of Communion: We are ready to subscribe the Confession of Faith, be in't what will; we are convinc'd in our Consciences, as much as any Man here, that no Faith is to be kept to a Popish King, and we both preach and pray heartily against the late King James, and the King of France too, and all their Accomplices: We are as much against the dangerous Principles of passive Obedience and Non-relistance, as either yourselves or the new Church of England; and we are clear for judging and depoling Kings whenever they difplease us. In short, Moderator, you shall find our Consciences as tractable in all things as your own, except one Scruple, which we defire some Time to be refolved in. -

Mod. What's that, Sir?

Mr. Shitt. 'Tis this: You know, Moderator, that you have all possible Assurances and Promises, from you know whom, that your Kirk shall be triumphant, and the new Church of England thinks she has as faithful Promises, and as good Grounds to hope she shall prevail; now, we are not yet clear in our Consciences which of these Promises shall be kept; therefore, Moderator, all that we desire is, that you'll let us sit at our own Fire-sides, and preach for our Stipends, till this weighty Case of Conscience be resolved and determined, and then we'll know what to do.

Mod. Well, Sir, in a Word, for all your long Speech, we'll have nothing to do with you.

[ Exit Shittle Shaking his Head.

Turb. Better the House of God lie in Rubbish, than be built by Samaritans.

Mod. Now, Brethren, it may be Cause of Lamentation for us, this Day, to see that the Statesmen do not go on Hand in Hand with us in the Work of the Lord.

Cov. It fets them well indeed, to be as far forward in the Cause of God as his own Servants: Na, Moderator, if they keep Sight of us, and be ready at our Call, we shall feek nae mair of them.

Sal. Alas! Moderator, they are so far from that, they now seem to have turn'd their Backs on us. What! have they not by Act of Parliament, taken the very Thunder-bolt of Excommunication from us? Have they not taken away all the civil and temporal Effects of it?

R. Eld. Fat ha' they deen? If that be true, we are but a Beik of Bees without Stangs.

Cov. Indeed, Brother, you fay very right: What will Malignants care for Curfes, if we can do nae mair? You ken they're better at that than we are. Nay, herry them, and shame them was the auld Gate o't.

Sal. But, Moderator, what was my Lord Whigridden, and the rest of our Elders who are Members of Parliament, doing when that Act pass'd?

Mod. In truth they cannot be blam'd in it, because it would have look'd prelatick-like in them to have watch'd and guarded that the Kirk sustained nae Prejudice; you know that was a Reason given for Prelates their being in all Courts: Moreover, they knew, that if any such Act were made, it was an impious Law, and of itself null, and of nae Force.——But, my Lord, what say you for yourself.

L. Whig. We have now Reason to lament with Jeremiah, and with David to sing, "Except the Lord do build the House, &c." The Kirk of Scotland in (my Lord) my Father's Time, was so fortisted with Cannons, Pikes and Guns, that there was no surprising of her; but now she's like a Garden without either Dike or Fence: We are left to ourselves every Way, and ye know that's a hard Case: For who cou'd have thought, that, in so good an Act as that rescinding several wicked Acts of Parliament,

as t fhou

com

con

I th

been

a Fi

Rig

the

Iw

ter

and

fee

W fee

E

P

d

as that for the keeping the 29th of May, &c. they shou'd have soisted in these wicked Acts anent Excommunication; for, to tell the Truth, I never considered more of an Act than the Title, and that I thought sounded well enough: But I have since been consulting with Sir William Littlelaw, a Lawyer, a Friend of ours, who tells me that the Claim of Right will secure us well enough as to that.

R. Eld. If we be nae otherways sekeered, bot be the Claim of Right, we've a cald Coal to blaw at: I wad anes see't sekeere the Quintra fra free Quarters, and a' the rest of the Abeeses mentioned in't, and then we may expect sume Guid o't; but guid seeth, Moderator, Sir William Littlelaw had nae a's Wits about him san that Claim was drawn, and sae's seen o't the Day; for they say he takes Fits.

Sol. What Fits? Fits of the Mother mean you? [From a Corner.] I have an infallible Cure for that.

R. Elder. Na; Fits of Madness.

Cov. That's a healfome Disease to be troubled in Spirit; I wish there were mony mae sick of that Disease.

Sal. if that be all, 'tis no great Matter: Semel insanivimus omnes.

r for-

· Na.

ready

that,

n us.

taken

from

and

, We

Vhat

nae

are.

auld

hig-

em-

be-

1 to ned

ven

er,

was nac

for 7e-

in

th

ifut es or et

t,

Turb. What needs all this Din about an Act of Parliament? Cannot we make an Act and Declaration rescinding and annulling that act of Parliament, and there's an End o't? 'Tis not the first Time we have done it.

All. Well thought on! most reasonable!

The Committee applands.

Mod. It is best we adjourn now, till to-morrow Morning, at which Time let us meet by Six o'Clock: Time's precious.

[Scene closeth.

ACT III. SCENE I.

Lady Murray's Yeards.

Will. and Violetta meet in a Walk.

Will. See, tho' thou wert not the Challenger, yet thou art first in the Field.

Vio. You see I am a Woman of Honour—[He offers to embrace and kiss her.] Off Hands, Knight, tis too soon to grapple yet: Since I was not the Challenger, I have the Choice of the Weapons.

Will. I beg your Pardon, Madam; Murderers are not to be treated according to the Law of Arms; you wounded me ere I did draw, and in Church too.——I'm resolved to repay you ere we part.

Vio. Peace, Sir, I'll warrant, you think me one of your conventicling fighing Sisters, whom, if you catch by their Bibles, you're as sure of 'em as other Maids when you catch them by their Smocks.

Will. What more wou'd you have? Our Love

was begun in the Church before the Priest.

Vio. Ay, but we must be there once again ere it be ended.

Will. So much Beauty, Wit and Innocence, I can bear it no longer.—[Aside] Ay, but this proud Heart of mine.——Damn whining, sighing, humble Love.——Come, bear it out stoutly once more.

Vio. Well, this is a Faux-pas, I find: Trufting my Person to a Stranger, no wonder he thinks me a good one. ——Since I have rashly engaged my Forces, the next Thing to be thought on is a safe Retreat; I must keep a good Rear-guard. [Aside.]——You was better, Sir, at preaching the last Day.—What! not one Word! it seems you want a Text!

Will.

clos

the

fom

Gra

Bel

acc

70

to

a !

Si

ta

t

r

Will. Faith, Madam, I have a Text I could handle closely here. [Offers to kiss her.

Vio. Bear off, good Sir, 'tis superfittious to kiss the Bible; forbear a little, you'll find this Text somewhat hard for you: And you must pray ere you meddle with it, I assure you.

Will. Hungry People, Madam, forget to fay Grace; I shall not fail to say one after I have eat my Belly-full.

Vio. But it seems you value the Meat little, if you account it not worth that Ceremony.

Will. I will contradict you, Madam; and, to let you fee that I am consciencious, I'll confine myself to cat of this Dish so long as I live: Gad'tis too good a Morsel for a splay Mouth.

Vio. If you mind to make your daily Bread of it, Sir, I'll be so much your Friend, that you shall never tafte it till I fee Grace fairly faid.

Will. To be plain, Madam: Are ye not weary of your godly Aunt, (for I have got Account of your Genealogy already) her eternal Whining and Lecturing, and the religious, nonfensical Cant of the right reverend godly Blockheads of the fanatick Order?

Vio. I was ne'er very fond of 'em, Sir; and, in Truth, methinks I have e'en fool'd away too much

Time that Way already.

Will. Wou'd you not be obliged to any that wou'd deliver you? I swear 'tis high Time for you now to be looking after the Business of your Creation.

Vio. I wou'd gladly know how that might be done; I believe I thou'd not be wanting to do my Part.

Will. I'll marry you at the rights, if you can find in your Heart to give yourself to an honest Fellow of no great Fortune.

with In Truth, Sir, methinks it were fully as much for my future Comfort, to beltow myfelf, and

E 3

any

r, yet - \( H_{\sigma} \)

the

ms; urch part. ne of you

ove e it

ther

can oud ng, tly

ing iks ged

alt nt

11.

any little Fortune I have, upon you, as on some reverend Spark in a Band and short Cloke, with the Patrimony of a good Gift of Prayer, (which perhaps he will keep in Exercise for two Hours on his Bridalnight, when I shou'd wish he were looking after some other Thing) and with as little Sense as his Father (who was hang'd in the Grass-Market for murdering the King's Officers) had of Honesty.

Will. Then I must acknowledge, dear Madam, I am most damnably in Love with you, and must have you by foul or fair Play, chuse you whether.

Vio. I'll give you fair Play in an honest Way.

Will. Then, Madam, I can command a Parson when I please; and if you be half so kind as I could wish, we'll take a Hackney, and trot up to some honest Curate's House; Besides, a Guinea, or so, will be Charity to him, perhaps.

Vio. Hold a little, I am hardly ready for that yet; I intend (tho' I parley) not to yield at the first Trumpet: And my little Sister is not yet provided for, according to the second Part of the Lecture.

Will. Gad, I had forgot that; I was fo tied to you, that I could not think on my Friend Frank, who is most dangerously in Love with her.

Vio. If he belie not his Name, Sir, that may be a Match too; for she has laboured long enough in this Purgatory, and wou'd be thankful to her Deliverer, I believe——— But by this Time my Aunt will be calling loudly upon her Chaplain, Mr. Wordie, her apparent Son-in-law, for Family-exercise; if I were absent, the absolute Decree would pass against me; I shou'd be thrust out of the Verge of Grace.

Will. Why call you him her apparent Son-in-2111

Vio. Faith 'tis apparent in her Daughter's Belly.

But I must be gone.

will. I hope one that's been so christianly bred up will not leave her sirst Love so soon; that's indeed falling back, but in the wrong Sense. And besides.

furr on but dou

fide

the not dec up

yo wa an di

I'll the for

Ldk

1

•

fides, when shall we meet again? The Canticles will furnish us with no new Occasion, I faid all I know on them yesterday.

me re-

he Pa-

ps he ridal-

fome

ather

lering

im, I have rfon

ould

ho-

will

yet;

first

ided

to e a

his

er,

be ner

I nst

ny.

ed

1-

-

Vio. I'll put you to a Task perhaps will fright you, but 'tis the only Way to see me; Go, get me a double-necked Cloke, a high-crown'd Hat, and all the other Appurtenances of a Presbyterian Minister, not forgetting the Time, Tone, Smack, Cringe, and decent Sigh: And in this Disguise you may venture up to my Aunt's House; faith you need not doubt your Welcome from her: I think it best you bring your Friend, Frank, with you, lest Laura's Mouth water, and she spoil the Plot; I'll prepare your Way, and tell my Aunt I invited two godly Ministers to dine with her, that are just now come from Holland: I'll say I saw you at my Lady Conventicle's Lodging this Morning.

Will. By the Lord I'll do it; I vow I cou'd transform myself to a stranger monster for your dear Sake.

Will. I believe he may; for he useth to walk there to shun the Impertinencies of Street-sops, who perfecute a Man as unreasonably as ever a Dragoon did a French Protestant.

Vio. — Or a Cameronian Minister and his Gown. — But I must go. So adieu. — Do you know our Lodgings? [Exit Violetta.

Will. Faith, and that I do.— Farewell, my Dear; I am your devoted Servant, I assure you—Now I'll go to Frank, and send him to meet the little Sister, and, in the mean time, endeavour to lay by any Sense I have, that I may the better fit the Character I am to put on—But here he comes—

Good

Good News for you, Friend! 'Twill do, Man! The Ladies are pliable, by the Lord.

Enter Frank.

Fra. I am truly restless till I speak with this Laura. Will. She'll be just now in Heriot's Yards after Prayers; she walks there, Boy. [They walk toward the Street; they meet People as they go, and halt.

Fra. Gad, I'll attend her — What grave reverend People are thefe, dost thou not know?

Will. Gad, that's a Parcel of Presbyterian Mini-Faith, Frank, theirs may be called the Foolishness of Preaching in a literal Sense; both in their Prayers and Sermons they're mighty Pindarick, for this Sentence hath no more Coherence with what's past, nor Connexion with what's to follow, than the Ave Maria has with the Lord's Prayer: They hate Confinement to Sense and Reason, and freely give you such Notions as the Spirit of God dictates to them (as they use to preface it.) This indeed is the only Thing I know they keep their Promife in. What Grace they may have I cannot tell, but for Gifts, methinks, they are not very throng about them; they have not, in my Opinion, many Talents to answer for: They should (as truly they are not wanting too) cry down carnal human Learning, for they are as scarce of that as of Honesty.

Fra. Gad, methinks, Christ's Vineyard is but ill

Tenant-stead (as we use to fay of our Lands.)

 fwear
if it Fello
of an old I main ly to ted:

ciples

Exe F gree the

Int

a Pr

of a got feichis

En

fen

tin

Lo

af ti

m

I to

I

aura. after ward halt.

The

Mini-Fooltheir

hat's
the hate
give s to
the
in.
for cout ents

for ill

not

Belely not the em

ines, ciples, for they speak one Thing, teach a second, swear a third, profess and maintain a sourth, and, if it could be, wou'd believe a sifth. Says one Fellow, Why! must I lose my Place for two Lines of an Oath? Says another, I'll swear, but I'll be the old Man still: A third, I have a Family must be maintained: Says a sourth, I'll keep my Place merely to despite my Colleague, who would have me outted: So down go the Oaths, as fast as tender Chicks a Presbyterian Minister's Throat after a long Sunday's Exercise.

Fra. I thought these Brethren of Iniquity had agreed better, and that there was no Jangling 'twixt them.

Will. Gad, these Sparks can never agree while their Interests are divided. If they can cheat one another of a Scholar, that's their great Plot: When one has got behind his Neighbour's Back, he'll tell, his Confeience is as wide as Hell; so thus throwing Dirt at his Neighbour, he bespatters himself. In short, Honesty and Ingenuity are banished far from them, Dissembling is their chiefest Quality.

[Exeunt discoursing.

EnterLord Huffy with a Whip in his Hand, and Dogs following, Lord Whigridden meeting him.

L. Huff. Holo, holo, holo! Good-morrow to your Lordship.

L. Whig. Your Lordship's Servant: Whither for timely with this Beast-equipage—Ha, ha, ha.

L. Huff. A-hunting, my Lord; a little Diversion

after the Toil and Fatigue of Business.

L. Whig. Upon my Honour, my Lord, I'm mightily burdened, truly born down with the Affairs and mighty Concerns of the Nation. I'll tell thee, Man, I had not fo much Time as to kifs my Wife these twelve Months for publick Business: My Concern for the State makes me neglect my Duty to my Family—But I go a-hunting to-day too, my Lord.

L. Huff.

L. Huff. Where are your Dogs? We'll go toge. ther.

L. Whig. There's a Brace of good, well-pointed Libels; [Pulling some Papers out of his Rocket.] I hunt the Curates, my Lord, the Wolves out of Christ's Vineyard; I am an old Tyke at them, i'faith -Ha, ha, ha, ha.

L. Huff. A good Jest, i'faith; I think I can run down a Curate too. ---- But I hope shortly we shall have none of that Kind of Cattle to hunt, then your Lordship's Dogs lie idle——Ha, ha, ha.

L. Whig. If it be otherways, it shan't be my Fault; --- I'll worry all I fee; my Dogs are suremouth'd——Ha, ha, ha.——But I'm told King William will interdict the Forest: He says he will protect the Curates, they behaving themselves as be-

Enter behind them Visioner and Novel.

L. Huff. What if he do! My Father, my Brother, and I, will lay down our Commissions: I shan't say much, ——But, mum, ——Let him fill them again.

-With fuch Men, in Hafte, I'm fure he Vi/. -

Chan't!

Nov. Such Beafts, you would fay.

Vis. Beasts or Men, 'tis all one; but speak discreetly. -- Let me tell you, I shou'd be forry King William loft fuch Servants: Faith they'll make our Nation famous for-

Nov. ----For producing Monsters, like the Indies.

L. Huff. If I whip not the Buyers and Sellers out of the Temple, let my right Hand forget her Cunning. [Clacks his Whip.

L. Whig. I have a Curate in Chase to-day, my Lord: You must return before the Council fit down; I'll need Assistance; the Fellow has complied, and may get Friends: When his Business is called, I'll make me as if I had ne'er heard on't before; fo out p ordin fuchat fu fwor caus' othe Your must

L. Lord from L

> go to acqu he's L

> > Hol

010 Ni

bet the rit

no de

E St SCOTCH REFORMATION.

out pull I my Pocket-book, and finding him there, ordine alphabetico, Oho, then, fay I! Is this Curate such-a-one, was drunk such a Day, beat his Beadle at such a Time, play'd at Cards in such a Company, swore such an Oath? A bloody-mouth'd Rogue, caus'd imprison one of the People of God, for no other Fault, saving his being at Bothwell-Bridge. Your Lordship must answer, The very same; you must avouch the whole Story.

L. Huff. Yes, faith, fo I shall; I'll assure the Lords I heard it this Morning, for a certain Truth, from your Lordship's own Mouth.

L. Whig. Well, your Lordship's Servant; I must go to the Committee: If you be near the Mint-House, acquaint my Lord Acreless with the Plot; you know he's a Consederate.—Ha, ha, ha. [Exit laughing.

ACT III. SCENE II.

The Old Lady's Lodging.

Old Lady, Mr. Solomon Cherry-Trees.

Niece, that there should be Union and Communion betwixt the Members of the same Kirk, and that, for the better Performance of this, there should be a Parity btwixt the Members.

Sol. Indeed there should betwixt Ministers, but none betwixt the Minister and his two Lay-elders.

toge.

ointed

ut of i'faith

n run

ly we then

my fure-

King

will

s be-

Bro-: I

re he dif-

orry

nake

the

out

un-

hip.

my

and

I'll

10

out

t.]

Old La. But as to the fittest Posture in Time of Exercise?

Sol. Indeed I can never get her convinc'd, that Standing is by far the most convenient.

Old

Old La. But she remains still obstinate as to Perse

Sol. Indeed I can hardly persuade her that a fallen Member will ever rife again. - But as for these Things, nothing but Experience, Madam; wait but a while, till the feel the in-bearing Work about her own Heart. I'm resolved to visit and deal with her; she's in her Chamber, I hope.

Maid. Pray you stop a little; she's just now adreffing herfelf.

Sol. No Matter, I must be instant in Season and Rushes forward into her Chamber,

Laura retires in Disorder.

rence

will

can

early

Yet

Bod

a Pi

rish,

the ! truff

tites

Bed

Lov

and

littl

you

You

war

don

Wo

fuc

as t

all,

of

Chi

lair

god

tat

dy

my fho

L

So

La

Maid. You're in a Prick-haste, i'faith.

Sol. I'm resolv'd to be impudent for once [ Aside.] -Madam, though you would be never so obstinate, these two fair breasts of yours evidently prove a Parity in the Church. [Handling her Breasts.] Look you now! Doth the one of these tyrannize over the other, thus, or thus? They live in brotherly Unity and Concord together. Do not imagine that the Body natural is thus orderly, and that the wife Creator would suffer such a Blemish in the mystical.

Lau. re-entering. Good Mr. Parson, you must fetch your Similies elsewhere; I assure you I'll be neither Parable nor Metaphor to your Kirk-government.

Dear Madam, forbear that Antichristian Name of Parson; that curs'd Prelacy runs still in your Head. ____But this leads me to discourse of bare Breasts and gaudy Apparel: O what a hideous Thing is it, for a Protestant Woman to have her Breasts strutting out thus! [Handling her Breasts.] -Yea, some will discover them thus far, to their eternal Shame. [Handling them, he thrusts his Hand down her Breaft.

Lau. Men of fuch Metal as you cannot endure it, but, however, methinks you're a little too familiar : I'm fure you never use to handle your Text fo closely. Sol.

Sol. It may be; but you'll never know the Difference till you find me in the Pulpit.

Lau. I say, once more, good Mr. Parson, (if that will fright you) forbear; you have not those Things can atone for pressing into a Lady's Retirement so early, I mean, Youth and Gallantry.

Perfe.

a fal-

as for dam; Work

d. deal

w a-

and mber.

order.

[ide.]

mate, a Pa-

Look

r the Jnity

the

Crea-

fetch ither

istian

ll in fe of eous her

[:5.] , to

· his east.

dure

o fa-

ext

Sol.

Sol. Nay, Madam, I think Soul-concerns .-Yet I am not so old neither. [Looking in the Glass.] -But, Madam, the Concern I have for your Body ---- your Mind, I mean ---- And 'twere a Pity such a fair Piece of the Creation should perish, and these bright Eyes, that shine like Stars in the Sanctuary: Put your Confidence in me, Madam; trust to my Conduct; I'll cure all the fleshly Appetites that war against the Spirit; I'll carry you to a Bed of Roses, where you shall taste the Sweets of Love. O the Height! the Depth! the Breadth! and the Length of a true active Love!

Lun. Hold, Sir! forbear! Gad, I'd not trust my little Spaniel Bitch in your Bed of Roses among your Perfumes and Things! Mark me, Sir; foh! You fcent frong of Tobacco and Sack_____I warn you; no more of your Cant. --- I'll pardon what's past, but, in Time coming, if I hear one Word of Beds, bare Breasts, Sweets of Love, and fuch Gibberish, that become your wry Mouth as ill as that fair Wig doth your Monkey-face; I'll reveal all, spoil your Trade, and make you appear, instead of a mortified Saint, and Preacher of the Gospel of Chrift, a most profane, lustful, old, impudent Vil-Exit Laura. lain.

Sol. I'll get me gone, and tell her Aunt she's a good Proficient in the Lessons of Grace: If I irritate her she'll mar all, and reveal me to the old Lady: She has my Thumb under her Belt once, I wish my whole Hand were really so; as old as I am, I Exit shaking his Head. should-

F

ACT III. SCENE III.

A Church. The Committee.

Moderator, Mr. Salathiel, Mr. Turbulent, Mr. Covenant, Mr. Solomon, Lord Whigridden, Ruling Elder.

Mod. DY his Providence we have gotten the hardest of our Work over: We've e'en almost rooted out the Curates, who were never planted in Christ's Vineyard: Let us now proceed to Planting, for now all Things are as they were at the Beginning.

Sal. Thanks be to his predestinated Majesty for that; Nam reges ad exemplos totis compositur orbos .--But, in Truth, Moderator, 1 must tell you, our College is doing its Duty to fend out excellent young Men to the Vineyard: Thanks to worthy Mr. M-ie, who teaches them to dispute categorematice and syncategorematice, and despise vain Philosophy and Mathematicks; and instructs them in many Things, which the Malignants, who want Grace, fay are contrary to Reason: Indeed, Moderator, they are above Reason. And what tho' they were contrary to it? What hath carnal Reason or human Learning to do about Christ's Spouse?

Mod. We've heard meikle Good of him, indeed,

Brother.

Sal. Truly, if all our Professors were like him, we shou'd be as happy a College as is in Scotland this Day; but you know how some of them perjured themselves to disappoint our Good-doing: Yet, for all that, I maun fay, if we were quit of one Man, we were e'en Neighbour-like yet .--- 'Tis the Lord's Doings, that bath purged the Fountains and Semmaries: They were all over-grown with Gartes's

Co fo

th

th

B

th

fic

fo

Y

be

D

D

ra

M

to

Se

fo ty

ha

to

ad

of

W

G

th kn

ta

fo

CO

Cartes's Mathematicks and human Reasoning; yea, some of them were so blasphemous, as to maintain that the King was supreme and unaccountable.

Mod. That's a' very true, Mr. Salathiel: But I think we have ta'en a Course with them for that

But now for Planting.

II.

Co-

uling

the e'en

ant-

d to e at

y for

05. --

Coloung

Mr.

atice

ophy

nany

race,

ator,

were man

leed,

him,

land

ured

, for

Man,

the

tains

with rtes's Turb. Truly, Moderator, I would have some of the malignant Expectants hook'd, if we cou'd be sicker of them.

Gov. The Curates are Bulls of Bashan, and therefore I'll speak a Word about Dogs, and ha' done. You know, where there are Bulls, there's a Bullbeating, and where there's a Bullbeating there are Dogs. Now, there are two forts of Dogs, God's Dogs and the Devil's Dogs; if you let in the Curates, the Devil's Mastiffs, they'll worry God's own Messons.——No more about that.

Sol. from a Corner.] I would have able Divines to dress the Spouse abundantly, in Season and out of Season, and to statisfy her Cravings and Longings; for, poor Virgin, she hath been starved these twenty-eight Years. The Malignants are People who have good natural Gifts: I think, if they had Grace to wait well or close upon their Work, we might admit them into the Bride's Bed.

Mod. I know People, who are right good Judges of Gifts, that fay the malignant young Men are as well endowed with them as any, and they will get Grace as foon as they come to our Side of the House; therefore, Officer, call in Mr. Turncoat.

Enter Turncoat bowing and cringing. Mod. Sir, What would you say to us?

Turnc. If it please your good Wisdom, I wou'd know what you'd fay to me.

Mod. It is Cause, Sir, of Mourning and Lamentation to you, as long as you live, that you dwelt so long in the Tents of Sin, and have so publickly committed Uncleanness with the Whore.

F 2

Turne.

Turne. My Lord—I mean, Moderator, I never in my Life fat on the Repentance-stool, and consequently never committed Adultery.

Mod. Ah, Mr. Turncoat, I see out of the Abundance of the Heart the Mouth speaketh; I see you have a Heart-blindness and Hankering after Prelacy, when you speak so the Language of the Beast, and do not understand the Language of the Sanctuary.

Clerk. Do you not know, Sir, that Mr. Covenant prov'd, that the Curates lay with the Whore of Babylon, and begat fourteen Blackbirds, to wit, the Prelates, out of that Text in the Revelation, "I " laid her upon a Bed, &c.

Cov. Right! But how came you to comply with these adulterous Loons ?

Turnc. Oh the Iniquity, Tyranny and Wickedness of former Times! I was e'en forced to communicate with them, as I wou'd with a Turk or a Jew; yea, a Papist: But I was still a good Presbyterian in my Heart, and I think that's enough.

Mod. Very good, Sir; e'en many good Ministers were forc'd to do the same; but their Hearts are right, and that's all that we or God seeks of them.

-But what do you fay about Prelacy ?

Turne. I think it a most superstitious, idolatrous, antichristian Order, reprobated before the Foundations of the World.

L. Whig. Mark, Moderator, he fays Episcopacy's Foundation is in the World.—Yea, he calls it an Order; I think he should rather call it a Confusion, or else we'll take Order with him.

Sal. That's no Matter, my Lord, whether it be Confusion or not, so it be not Order: But, as touching the Confession of Faith!

Turne. I think it the best Book in the World, and that the Penmen thereof were more than supernaturally inspired.

R. Eld.

on

Bi

Bi

bo

Si

R

71

G

h

I

1

never confe-

Abunee you Prela-Beaft, Sanc-

f Bathe

ckedcomk or a Pref-

with ifters is are them.

rous, undaacy's it an

it be

orld, per-

Eld.

R. Eld. See yet, Moderator, he ca's the Confession of Faith a Buik, I think it ought to be ca'd a Bible, for the Haill Duty of Man is ca'd a Buik.

Sal. No Matter whether it be called a Book or a Bible (for the word, hæc biblia biblia, may fignify both) so it be not a Whole Duty of Man.—Well, Sir, you'll subscribe it without any Qualifications, Restrictions or Reservations, and assent thereunto, non solum materialiter, but formaliter.

Turne. Yes; and I think there's an Argument against the Perfection of Scripture, because it contradicts the Confession of Faith in the Points of universal Redemption and Reprobation.

Sol. A raw-gifted Brother this; he seems not to have the two Corner-stones, the two cardinal Graces, the good Gifts of Preaching and Lecturing, together with the long long Gift of Prayer.

Cov. I'll give you two Advices about Reading of Books: First, what Books ye should not read; and, 2dly, and lastly, what Books ye should read. First, read no prelatical, papistical, heathen Authors, Jew-ish, or Morality Books. 2dly, Read Gray's and Guthrie's Sermons, Rutherford's Letters, the Covenant, and Confession of Faith.

Mod. The Benison of the Covenant light upon you, Sir, for now and ever. [Exit Turncoat bowing and cringing]—Well, Sirs, I find this will not do the Turn, except we fall upon some new Way to cause all the rich Nobles and wise Gentles concur with us in the Work of the Lord.—If they knew themselves, they would e'en come and lend God a List without Bidding: But, Sirs, what shall be done with that?

Turb. As the Lord lives, I think we are better quit of them; for you know 'tis faid by the Apostle, "Not many wise, not many noble, not many learned ed, not many rich;" and I think that the only Mark our Kirk hath of the true Kirk.

F 3

Mod ..

Mod. Let us meet again at ten o'Clock, Brethren, for I hear some ill Reports, that they are Enemies to the Kirk: So we'll do as much as we can, and leave undone the Things we do not.

[Scene closeth.

N

w fis

to

By

po

ta

f

t

fi

ACT. IV. SCENE I.

Heriot's Yeards.

Enter Laura and Violetta in a Walk.

Lau. Sifter, you told me your Servant said his Friend used to walk here to shun the tedious Impertinencies of Town-sops; but it seems he either slights the Occasion of meeting me, or his Friend was dull.

Vio. Faith, Sister, I find you're in Love of him already, you're so impatient; but, if they be what we are certainly inform'd they are, they're neither fuch Sots, nor fo ill-natur'd.

Lau. I should like better, i'faith, a Conversation with the lusty, brisk, brave, young Fellow, that can speak Sense, and do his Courtesy right, than one of our true Presbyterian Blockheads, those Haters of Reason, and Criers-down of good Manners, as much as set Forms; who know no more their Duty to a Lady, than to their Sovereign.

[Exeunt by the Walk.

A little after enters Frank folus.

Fra. Damn these fanatick Dogs! had it not been their long Prayers she'd been here ere now; I am all Impatience to see her; it were more for her Ediscation and Comfort to hear me assure her, in short, that I am her most humble Servant, than a Fellow, after as many wry Mouths as wou'd fright a Necromancer, hren, es to leave

feth.

.

his teems his

him hat her

ion can one ers as lk.

Ein

a er,

Necromancer, and as many Pangs as his Mother had when she bare him, tell his Maker, with an Emphasis, that the King of France is a Tyrant, and ought to be rooted out——But here she's! I'm all Fire! By the Heavens she's fair! Gad she's young!

Re-enter Laura fola.

Lau. Here he is! Now for Gravity—Let me fee, I'll think on Damnation, as my Aunt bids me, when I incline to laugh.

[Afide.

Fra. Madam, may I have the Honour to accompany you in your Walk?

Lau. If you did, Sir, it might prove scandalous, and I am neither willing to hazard my own Reputation, nor ruin any little you may have.

Fra. No great Scandal, Madam, for the Place is publick. Methinks it shou'd rather ruin my Reputation to walk by a handsome Lady, like a Merchant on the Exchange—I'm sure it wou'd in some Places where I have been.

Lau. If it be only, Sir, a general Piece of Gallantry, that I believe you are ready to pay to all the Street-whores in Town, it hardly merits my Thanks; fo I affure you I'll neither laugh at you myself, nor tell it as Jest, and Nobody sees to censure you.

[She's going, he detains her.

Fra.—Gad, Madam, but you escape not so; fince you had the Patience to hear one Mr. Solomon (I believe they call him) mangle so unmercifully an innocent Piece of Scripture yesterday, methinks thou art Nonsense-proof; so you must e'en bear with me a little; besides, 'tis Charity to administer Comfort to me, for I am in Love.

Lau. I find 'twill out, and I am content it shou'd [Afide.]—— On condition you'll leave me, Sir, I'll promise you my best Help; I'll pray for you, Sir.

Fra. If you be my Interceffor, Madam, I hope I shall soon be happy, for the Lady is young, rich and handsome, and may have many other good Qualities. Besides, she's an Intimate of yours, I am sure.

Lau,

Lau. Make your Demands reasonable, and I'm sure I shall do all I can for you.

Fra. I take you at your Word, Madam; gad, you are the fair One yourself.

Lau. I am oblig'd to you, Sir, if all these good Things be said of me; for tho' I always believed them of myself, yet you are the first Flatterer that ever told me of them.

Fra. Then, at least, I have no declared Rival.

Lau. Nay, for that, Sir, this is the Way to get you one, and a dangerous one too: To tell me of so many good Qualities will make me fall in Love with myself; but you must speak good Things of yourself ere I can love you, if you wou'd be at that.

Fra. There I wou'd be, indeed; but I'll be entirely beholden to you for your Love. I'll disclaim Merit.

Lau. But this is an Age wherein Charity waxeth cold.

Fra. I'll only alk Liberty to ferve you.

Lau. You'll, ten to one, expect Wages in the End. Fra. Ay, Madam, yourself, or nothing: I could be content to have Earnest in Hand.

[Offers to kifs her.

F

But ry, L

Scri

mig

cife

ry v

a C

Go

at

thi

yo Sil

ľ

A.

m

TE

21

Lau. Hold off, Sir, you are a faucy Servant; befides, we are not yet agreed; I must know what you can do, ere I swap a Bargain. Cou'd you come every Sunday to Church, and be condemned, without sleeping or whistling, to sit gravely and hear two Hours of a Sermon?

Fra. I cou'd, every Day in the Week, to see you. Lau. And hear ten or twelve double Verses of a Pfalm fung to a pitiful Tune ?'

Fra. I could hear from the first of the Revelation to the last of the Genesis, to have the Happiness to hear you sing as one of the Quiristers.

Lau. It seems you're an ill Divine—But these are two mortifying Pieces of Service, Are they not?

Era.

Fra. Flat Tyranny, as I shall answer to God—But hold, Madam, after all that, Could ye love, marry, live with me, and beget Sons and Daughters?

Lau. If you'd promise to live at home, read the Scriptures, sing Psalms, and pray in your Family, I might perhaps do my Duty.

Fra. Gad, I shall be very good at Family-exercise, I'll warrant you—But, Madam, 'tis not Railery with me; faith, I'm resolv'd I'll have you: I have a Comerade has a Plot on your Sister too; I cannot tell if you know on't.

Pm

you boog

eved

that get

of

ove

s of

nat.

re-

aim eth

d.

pld

r.

cou

e--

it

0

1.

1

O

Lau. I believe I do; and I must try your Fidelity and Courage, as my Sister does your Comerade's: Go, put me on a Presbyterian Minister, and meet me at my Aunt's against Dinner; your Friend is to do this for my Sister; he'll accompany you, and instruct you farther: If you love me as much as he doth my Sister, you'll venture as far for me; I'm generous; I'll reward you.

Fra. Madam, faith that's hard; gad 'tis a monstrous Disguise.

Lau. No more Words, I see People coming; remember 'tis my first Command. So farewel.

Exit Laura.

Fra. Madam, your Servant. Gad I'll keep it most religiously; I'll endeavour to have as little Sense, and as much Hypocrify as the best of 'em—Yet what if I should be forced to say Prayers, or Grace—Stay, when I was young, my Mother taught me a Word or two. [Exit muttering his Grace.] "O "God of all Power and Glory, who hast created us at this Time—

ACT

ACT IV. SCENE II.

A Church. The Committee.

Moderator, Mr. Turbulent, Mr. Salathiel, Mr. Solomon, Mr. Covenant, Clerk, Lord Whigridden, Ruling-Elder.

Brethren, we are met here in this Place, by God's special Providence, about his own Work: I hope there are none here but will go on both cheerfully and willingly with the worthy Design of Reformation. Indeed our Hands are much weakned, for the Court e'en begins to forget the House of God: Therefore we ought to go on with the more Strength, Courage and Zeal in the Work we are going about—Clerk, read the Assembly's Act about Plantations; for that's the Thing we are to meddle with at this Time.

[Clerk reads.

Glerk. The right reverend the Moderator and General Assembly of the Kirk of Scotland, taking to their Consideration the Growth of Profanity for the Want of the Gospel, and the Abundance of Hypocrify through the Preaching of the same, have, with an unanimous Consent, ordained the respective Synods and Presbyteries to make diligent Search after all Vagabonds, Randy-beggars and Sabbath-breakers, &c. to give up their Names to the Kirk-sessions—

Turb. Moderator, the Clerk knows not what he

Clerk. Yes, if you wou'd hear it read out, you wou'd be convinced.

Mod. Say on, Sir—[Turbulent offers to speak.] Do pot disturb the Committee, Sir. [Clerk reads. Clerk.

To feeking tions

GI

Cle

they to tak

dienc

Com Sir, tee.

7

Pre mea 1 de

Bu Sp

w ne

D

CI

ly n Clerk. The Assembly appoints their Names to be dilated to the respective Kirk-sessions; and, in case they be contumacious, ordains the Civil Magistrate to take notice of them, ay and till they give Obedience to the Kirk.

Extractum per me Jo. Spaldin.

Turb. I say, Moderator, that's not the Act we are seeking; not one Word in that Act about Plantations.

Clerk. Will you hear it read over again.

II.

· So-den,

ace,

his

l go thy uch

the

rith

ork

Act

to ds.

ie-

to

he 0-

th

yer

s, ie

u

-

1

Mod. There's no Need of that, I think the whole Committee feems to be fatisfied that this is the Act. Sir, you shou'd not speak against the whole Committee.—Sit down, Sir.

Turb. Moderator, the Plantation-act names a Subcommittee, who are to call in all the Curates and Prelates that preach in the Country; and, unless you mean them by the Vagabonds and Randy-beggars, I do not fee this is the Act.

Mod. What if we do, Sir? there's no great Harm. But will you have a Vote whether it be or not? Speak out, Sir?

Cov. I think all this Debate needless. Let Mr. Turbulent tell what the Act was, or acquiesce to the Determination of the Committee.———I think the Clerk shou'd be believed.

Mod. Mr. Salathiel, was you present when the Act was made? Is this the Act the Clerk has read just now, Sir?——Say, Sir, and rid our Feet of this Difficulty.

Sal. As the Truth is in me, I cannot fay positively this is the Act, but, for any Thing I know, it may be the Act. Nam de futuris contingentibus non datur determinata certitas.

Mod. What think you, then! Must we refer it to a Vote.

Clerk. Moderator, I have found the Act.

Mod. Sir, you are to blame for putting the Committee to all this needless Trouble; read it out, Sir, and fee you be right now, and not wrong a fecond Time, once more. [Clerk reads.

Clerk. The Moderator and the General Affembly of the Kirk of Scotland, having considered the great Damage the Nation, and Kirk of God within the famen, hath received, and doth daily receive, from the feveral Persons who call themselves Ministers of Christ, by venting the Soul-destroying and Gospeloverturning Principles of Arminianism, Pelagianism, Arianism, Nestorianism, &c. doth, with an harmonious Vote, forbid all the foresaid pretended Ministers to preach in any Place, either within or without the Kingdom, ay and till such Time as they profess their Repentance to the Committee appointed for recovering Apostates. Extractum per me Jo. Spaldin.

Mod. Now, you have heard the Act, fay, What will be the best 'Vay of treating with those of the prelatick Party who will join with us in Communion?

Sal. There are three Things in that Business would be narrowly considered. Iftly, How are we to treat? adly, With whom are we to treat? 3dly, and lastly, Whether we should treat or not?

Mod. Sit down, Mr. Saluthiel; let us alk my Lord's Opinion --- My Lord, what think you of the Bufiness before our Hands now, for the present under Consideration?

L. Whig. Such is the Sense of my own Infirmity, Moderator, that I needed more than an ordinary Confidence, without your Defire, to declare my Opinion. I perceive the Thing before the Board is Communion-terms with the prelatick Party, about which I shall speak three Words, and ha' done. I shall begin with the last first. First, then, of the last; I think the Institution of the Sacrament of our Saviour to be the great Mark of Communion in the catholick Church, and that which distinguisheth Protestants from Papists, and Presbyterians from both. 2dly, I think the Ceremony of fitting much more decent and edifying than that of kneeling, which is idolatrous, latrous profan Moder Table Confid which Mo yourf under

Soi [fron were Chrif ty to M

> Turk Tpolit as m Day > > rate they com

noo

Que fal ficu be by on W the

ar

fec

Cu

Si

latrous, or standing, which is a superstitious and most profane Posture in Time of divine Ordinances. Lastly, Moderator, the admitting of Persons to the holy Table, is a Matter of great Importance, and deserves Consideration, and ought not rashly to be done, which was the great Error of the prelatick Party.

Mod. Will your Lordship be pleased to explain yourself? There are some here who have Difficulty to understand you.

cond

ads.

obly

reat

the

om

of el-

m, ni-

ers

he eir

r-

n.

ill

a-

d

Sol. Tho' I be not a Member in this Committee, [from a Corner] yet I'll give my Opinion as if I were a Member. Have a care of the Concerns of Christ's Kirk; get able Men, well-gifted, to do Duty to her for Fructification.

Mod. Sit down, Sir, --- What fay you, Brother

Turbulent ?

Turb. I advise, for a more expedite Form of Depositions, that there be a libella universalis, which is as much as to say, an universal Libel; and that two Days of Compearance, or the Forenoon and Afternoon of the same Day, be allotted for the whole Curates on this and on the other Side of Tay, and that they be cited at the Instance of the Committee to compear before it.

Cov. To what our Brother has faid I have two Queries, two Difficulties, one Fear, and a Proposal; or rather, two Proposals, two Queries, one Difficulty, and a Fear. My Proposals are, that there be an Act prohibiting all answering of Libels either by Word or Writ, and that the Curates be libelled on Faults to be done, as done. My first Question is, Whether we should plant their Kirks ere we depose them, or depose them ere we plant their Kirks? My second Question is, How is it possible to reach those Curates that are neither on this nor on the other Side of Tay?

Rul. Eld. Let 'em come in by a Class of their own, which, with the other two—let me see—two and one, make just three.

Cov. Well, my Difficulty is, whether this Libel should be written or printed; and my Fear is, that the Curates call this indirect Dealing, and judging in our own Cause.

Turb. What, will not Christ be Judge in his own Cause at the last Day? Did Joshua, when he extirpated the Idolaters, cite every Man to personal Compearance, and give him a Copy of his Libel asorehand? Did Christ, when he whipt the Buyers and Sellers out of the Temple, take every particular Huckster-wise by the Lug? I trow no.

All. Strong Sense!

Mod. But, as to these Difficulties, what fay you,

my Lord ?

L. Whig. First, to conclude, there being a standing Relation betwixt Flocks and their ancient Pastors, and Churches being comprehended in Synods, and Synods in Presbyteries; I would say, Churches being comprehended in Presbyteries, and Presbyteries in Provincial Assemblies, and these again in the General Assembly, this will breed a Kind of a you understand me———Now, this being joined to the Badness of the Weather in the Winter-time, and Plantations following Depositions, either immediately before, or immediately behind——it would be considered that there be no Stop put to the Work of the Lord.

Mod. Where are your Doubts now? —I trow they are gone, Sir.

Cov. But still as touching the Proposals.

Three Speak. A Committee for the Proposals, another for the Questions, and another for the Fear.

R. Eld. We canna vote a Committee till we ken wha shall be on't.

Cov. But as to private Baptism and Communion ?

All. Committee, or no Committee!

Mod. To appeale the Tumult, let us pray—
O Lord, the Confusion of our Minds shews that our Spirits are in Disorder; and, as we were orderly before

be fo great us, fo ae Ga

fore o

Sun-lof.

it:
which
at Ibe C
Depo

Ent

H

Mr. the

Lo

yo

put

53

fore our Confusion begun, so we intreat that it may be so when it is at an end. We thank thee for the great Harmony, Oneness and Union that is amongst us, for, be we orderly, be we confused, we gae all ae Gaet, &c.

Turb. I hear that we are to be dissolved; that this Sun-shine will not laste; that should be taken notice of.

Libel

that

ig in

own

irpacomfore-

and uck-

you,

ınd-

ors, and be-

ries Ge-

ned

me, me-uld

ork

ney

10-en

1 ?

ur

e-

re

Mod. I hear no less, Brother, but I do not believe it: However, let us adjourn till the Afternoon, at which Time we will meet and give a Home-stroke at least. In the mean time, I think, there should be Committees appointed for Appeals, Declinatures, Depositions, Plantations, pastoral Relations and Scriptural Sibnesses, and Acts of Transportability.

[Exeunt.

ACT IV. SCENE III.

The Abbay-Gate.

Enter Lord Huffy kicking and whipping two Dogs led by two Soldiers; a Huntiman with his Hands bound; Boy, &c.

L. Huff. Y Ou damn'd Curs, I'll teach you to hunt contrary to my Orders! And for you, Mr. Huntsman, to be sure you must be disaffected to the present established Government both in Church and State. Carry him to the Guard!

[Exeunt Soldiers and Huntsman.

Boy. But the poor Curs understand not your Lordship's Order.

L. Huff. Peace, you Rascal; I'll teach them and you both to understand.—Carry in the Dogs, and put them in close Prison; let no Body see them except an Officer be present.

[Exit Soldier leading the Dogs to Prison. G 2 Boy

Boy whispering .- Colonel's Dogs, Sir.

L. Huff. The Devil's Dogs, Sir! I say, If the best Colonel in the Army were a Dog, and hunted contrary to my Proclamation, he should find no better Treatment.—Go, Sirrah, tell the Colonel I have catch'd his Dogs hunting within two Miles of the Town, contrary to my Commands, and have laid them in Prison till he find Surety for their better Behaviour.—What! from your Post, you Son of a Whore!

Enter a Soldier, Huffy whips him.

Sol. An't please your Lordship, the little Dog has broke the Window, and escap'd through the Grate.

L. Huff. You Villain, pursue him! raise the Huy and Cry. If you get him not back, I'll cause shoot you for your Neglect: Damn'd Cur, break the King's Prison! What, you Rascal, loitering! pursue! make haste!

[Exit Huffy, whipping the Soldier.

ACT IV. SCENE IV.

The Parliament-Close.

Enter Will. and Frank discoursing, People passing by.

Fra. I Cannot bear the Thoughts of this Difguise, rid me of it, dear Will. if it be possible; gad I'd almost rather lose my new Mistris, than be beholden to Lying, Dissimulation, Sighing, a doubleneck'd Cloke, the Covenant and Confession of Faith, for her.

Will. It must be; Two thousand Pounds, and a handsome young Lady—The End's pleasant, tho' the Means be rough and odd.—But look you there.

Fra. Faith that Fellow looks well.

Will.

Mean he'il must Fra great

Wi

him a

to do

three Inter Good tisfie could of L pet I noth Mou

F

ken, ing a of the and Titl gion ciple his than own the vil men Side he l eve a bl go Will. Indeed you have taken the best Prospect of him at first: Gad he looks big, as if he had a Mind to do something, when the Man has no more ill Meaning than the silliest Cobler in Town. Gad he'll bluster, make a Noise, tell it must be so, and it must be no otherways, and he will—

Fra. And what will he? Perhaps something of no great Import.

the

ted

no

el I

of

ive

et-

on og

he uy

ot

he ır-

er.

y.

e,

2-

e-

1,

o'

Will. Why, nothing at all; after a Pause or two, three or four Frowns, a long Declaration of his Interest in the Peerage, and his Concern for the Good of the Nation, he sits down and tells he's satisfied, and will say no more. In short, no Party could ever six him, no Favour oblige him, no State of Life content him; he's exactly like a Lady's pet Dog, who snarls at every Thing, but can bite nothing, except you thrust your Hand into its Mouth.

Fra. Or like an old Leacher, whose Tongue's the unruliest Member about him.

Will. Ay, a State Hettor, with the Spirit of a Chicken, who has been all his Life strutting and bawling against Courtiers and Favourites, and yet each of them, from the highest to the lowest, has trampled and pils'd upon him; his whole Honour lies in his Title and Blazon; his Loyalty, as well as his Religion, is compounded of his own Want of all Principles, and his Lady's Whigry; he talks highly of his Country, but never did it any other Service, than to help to put it into Confusion, to ferve his own infatiable Avarice, which is the only Thing in the World he is constant to. If God and the Devil were perfonally in Competition for the Government, a hundred Pounds of Odds carries him to either Side; and I doubt not, if he had been an Apostle, he had underfold Judas. He's no Man's Friend, and every Man's, and yet no Man's Foe: In short, he's a blazing nothing, and below History. So let him go there.

G 3

Fra.

Fra. I perceive, Will. thou art pretty free in thy Descriptions. Prithee, what's he that seems to look every Way, and yet no Way? He turns about so suddenly, as if he thought the Devil at his Heels.

Will. Consider him now, Frank, thou mayst look as many Ways as he seems to do, and travel as far as he hath done, ere you find out such another. Before his Country was curs'd to have him for a Magistrate and a Statesman, he past for a pleasant Sort of a whoring, painting, talking, fiddling, lewd Fellow; and a Hero of Fighting, Fineness and Belles Lettres: But he hath made such a damn'd Figure since he was dress'd in Scarlet and Ermine, that a Body wou'd think he had e'en conjured up the good old Gentleman of Hell himself to judge of our Lives and Fortunes.

Fra. Isn't this the mighty Fop, who made a long pedantick Speech against his Predecessors, and in Praise of himself, about Shelves, and splitting and adding of Grain-weights to the Balance of Equity, and all that?——I remember to have seen the Speech abroad.

Will. Ay, but there is a Difference betwixt Pedantry and Madness; he'll tell you now that the Government cannot thrive, because it is not bloody enough; he's mad at Witnesses that will not damn themselves to destroy the Pannel; and, sitting gravely in his Robes, he'll tell you, (in Mockery of all Laws and Government) That a good Sword, and a stout Heart, is e'en a Lawyer's or a Pleader's best Security.

Fra. Then, methinks, Will. We have got our Lives and Properties as well fecured as if we were in old Thomas Malmsburie's State of Nature.—But, hark ye! Who is it that comes there, with these greafy cut-finger'd Gloves, Staff, and Cravat-string, which before the happy Revolution has been of Scarlet.—I protest to God, my old fanatick Inquisitor!

But

as an fo n he'll fave won twe

But,

I ha

low nov find Kir his hin of for on nir

> cil ne th Pe

> > fe

be W ou gr

T fo p

n

But, ha! his Mouth's gone to one Side, I think, fince

I had the Honour to see him.

thy

ook

fo

ok far

er.

12-

el-

les

are

t a od

res

ng

in nd

li-

he

e-

he

dy

nn

e-

la

est

es ld

rk

ſy

h t.

11

Will. A Saint, i'faith, as free of worldly Wisdom as any that ever dyed a Kalendar. Gad, he hath not fo much Wit as to diffemble. Ask Justice of him, he'll tell he's fworn to the contrary. Pray God fave you from his Pocket; he has as much there as wou'd keep the Hangman in Employment these twelve Months, at the Rate of three Curates and as many Jacobites a-day: His Mouth, you see, followed his Words in Quest of the Meaning, but is now on its Return to its proper Place, despairing to find it. That Staff is a great Pillar of the true Kirk, and his Arfe is more able to support it than his Head! He has just as much Mother-wit as fits him to be a Provost of a Town of twenty Shillings of Common-good; as much Religion as is necellary for a Lay-elder; as much Courage as he may look on a Snail's Horns without fainting; as much Learning as to make Duty plain; as much Honelty as is required in a Member of our present Privy-Council; and, finally, Beloved, as much Grace as is needful in a Scotch Reformer, with no more Eltate than can be reasonably expected in a Presbyterian Peer, and can fecure him from the Hazard of Forfeiture the next Revolution.

Fra. — Hold! Hold! Too much of him, he's below the Dignity of Consideration. — Bless me! What for a shitten Monster's this comes crawling out of that Coach there? He looks as if he were in great Perplexity, like some Under-clerk's second Man bearing a Burden of Informations.

Will. That's the Spawn of a Nobleman, a true Type of the Body politick; you see how confoundedly his Head sits, and those Excrescences represent the Kirk, that deforms and burdens the State extremely: The Pillars of both, you see, are marvellously weak and crooked; that's the Covenant on his Breast, and in one of the Bunches on his Back there's the Confession of Faith, and in the other, Calvin's Book to prove Jure gladii coërcendos esse hareticos. If he has little of human Shape, he has as little of human Nature, and 'tis impossible to tell whether his Body or Mind be most deformed; he breathes Stink, spits Venom, speaks Vengeance and Cruelty, and begets Monsters. In short, there is nothing like him but the rest of his own Kindred. -

Fra. - Rest! - Good God! Can there be more than one of these Creatures in one Nation at once ?

Will. Faith, there's a whole Family of them, Frank; and I'll tell thee more, they are the Rulers and Governors of this ancient Kingdom. -

Fra. ——Ancient!——Damn it for an old Monster of a Kingdom! To be ruled by Monkies and Monsters: Gad, that's to burlesque Government, and affront human Kind to all Intents and Purpoles, to make them Governors.

Will. Thou growest angry, I think, Frank; and therefore no more of those Caterpillars. - Come along, and take a View of this old wry-necked Fellow with the fraudulent Countenance.

Fra. Another Pillar of the Government, I'll warrant you! I shall not say if this Government be against God, but I'm fure 'tis against Nature.

Will. That's a true-blue Rogue as ever piss'd, whose Conscience is as much awry as his Head is; he has as much Sense and Philosophy as to make himself a Fool in Print; as much Honesty as makes him a Whig and a Rebel; and as much Law and Justice, as from one Decision to give Occasion for seven new ones. He hath begot a Generation whose Legitimacy none queltions, they have fo many Marks of the Father, and fo true a western Brood, that, if they live, they'll be Old Sir Harries; every one of them hath his Turn of Petship; and he's so careful to have unjust Gain carefully distributed

amon fuum old F

Fr they you.

> W vices for t dom of th Mult Pres

have F W any and fall bear mak thar teri and tho tha Leg for true tha and pat

fen

pic

ref

Kn all

it.

among

SCOTCH REFORMATION. among them, that, at least in some Case, he's for fuum cuique, &c. Thou feest he's a fresh vigorous old Fellow, and perhaps may live to be hang'd yet.

Fra. These are. Gentlemen of the long Robe too; they are your new Lords of the Session, I'll warrant

the

dos

he

to d;

ice ere

n-

re

at

n,

rs

ld

d

d

0

d

e

Will. Ay, they are new Judges all over, and Novices too; many of them neither know nor care for the old Laws and Constitutions of this Kingdom; and for the new ones, they make any Thing They are the strangest mix'd of them they please. Multitude that ever was feen; fome of them are Presbyterians, some Episcopals, and most of them have no Religion at all.

Fra. But they must profess to be Presbyterians.-Will. —Yes, that they do, and would profess any Thing for their Interests. Lying, Cheating, and Rebellion are hereditary to many of them, and fall as naturally to their Share, as the Name they bear, or their Father's Estate: Some of their Names make a greater Figure in the Registers of the Kirk, than in the Records of the State; for publick Adulteries are now become the Mark of a true Reformer; and they who invade other Mens Properties, are thought the only fit Men to secure ours: Seest thou that dark, gloomy-ey'd Fellow with the wooden Leg? He may be called a crooked Justice, indeed, for his Mind is as deformed as his Body; he's a true Emblem of the whole Bench. In short, Sir, that Judicature, which was fo famous for Justice and Literature, when you went abroad, is now patch'd up of a Pack of Country Lairds, and old fenfeless, greedy, covetous Clerks, with two or three pick'd Advocates, who are purely led by their Interest and Humour: Many of them have not the Knowledge to administrate Justice, and they have all of them taken the Assurance, and sworn against it.

Fra. But yonder a ferious Cabal.

Will. Yes, about their last Night's Intrigue, or procuring a Whore or so. These are zealous Reformers, i'saith! Base, Romish, Popish Jades; there's nothing for them, but a sighing Sister, a groaning, godly, Presbyterian Sweet-singer, (Whore in English) that's their good old Cause, i'saith. One of them is the strangest Mongrel 'twixt a Brute and a Man that can be; he neither speaks nor thinks, and, were it not for his long Wig, Hat and black Coat, he might pass for a Horse i' the Grass-Market. He has something of human Shape, but nothing of human Reason. They never plot above lying with their Chamber-lains Wives, or picking up a Street-whore, in case of Necessity.

Fra. And who are these, Will? Gad, thou art mighty good at Epithets this Morning.

Will. That's a Pack of Jacobitish Williamites, the strangest Monsters in the Kingdom, having Jacobites Hearts, and Williamites Hands: facobites Heads and Williamites Tongues: They are just now rewarding the Favours done them by King James, on his dutiful Son and lawful Successor King William: They, on the other Side, are to restore King James; Gad, they'll drink his Health, in Contempt of the Government, if they should be hang'd for it, but never made a farther Plot to restore him, than to write a mystical Letter, drop some ambiguous Words, without either Sense or Meaning; are snap'd up, give Caution, take an Oath or two, and escape; and all this Suffering for their King: In faith they're good for nothing, but to be Noblemen, and to bear the Titles of Duke, Marquis, Earl, Viscount, Lord, &c.

Fra. Can'ft thou tell me who are these with the Papers in one of their Hands?

Will. Faith, Sir, that's a Parcel of People that are neither Williamites nor Jacobites, and yet wou'd be thought mighty with both. Gad, that's the Claim of Right in one of their Hands; they love mightily to be suspected, and rather than fail of this, they plot plot may Com no m have Knarried tily we

Hin u hum Nob dy a hath chac Lon ratio ftoo get who Mal Th Coi WO WO Th twe Un Col Ne and tho tak ftar fut

out

plot and reveal. Tell them any Thing, and you may as well placade it upon the Cross. They are a Company of discontented Blockheads at best, with no more Models in their Heads, than some of them have thousand Merks.

or

lee's

ng,

(h) is nat

it

ht

ne-

n.

er-

afe

art

the

Ta-

tes

wo

es,

111:

5;

the

ne-

ite

ds,

up,

and

ood

the

TC.

the

are

be im

ily

nev

lot

Fra. Gad, I never faw such a Congregation of Knaves and Fools all my Life. I'm damnably wearied of this publick Exchange; and, besides, I mightily long for Laura. Prithee let's be gone, and, as we walk along this Mob of Politicians, give me a Hint of the most remarkable of them. Will. Then, in the first Place, there's a Calf in human Shape; a long North-Quintra feel young Nobleman, who hath no more Sense than to be greedy and troublesome, and no more Courage than he hath Wit and Discretion. After he was shamefully chac'd weeping from his own Country, he went to London, and, fince he came down, hath got a Declaration that he hath not a Pox; but 'tis thought he stood more in Need of a Testimony of his Ability to get one. There's a Pack of disbanded Colonels, who raised new Regiments to thrust out their old Masters, and are now mocked by their new Ones: There's one of them, too, stampt in the Devil's Coin; and none of them ever faw, some of them wou'd never have feen, and Devil a one of them wou'd e'er have looked their Enemies i' the Face-There's a young empty fluttering Spark of two and twenty, created a Hero, and was fent to dragoon an University to Whigry and Rebellion ——Here's a Colonel fights Duels in Buff; he brought the first News of Gillicrankie, tho' he was not near the Place, and that all his Neighbours were dead on the Spot, tho' they ran away as cowardly as himself-But, take Notice, Frank, here's a Brace of reverend ftarch'd Villains, two new Doctors of Aberdeen refuting the old Ones, and contriving a new Address out of Sherlock's Cale of Allegiance.

Fra.

Fra. — Damn them and Sherlock too! Priests of all Religions are the same! Their Belly's their God, and they are Villains from Generation to Generation — But, faith, 'tis Dinner-time— Let us go out; gad, this Place smells of Treason and Insidelity— I shall bespeak the Curate that lives next Door to the Ladies.

Will. And I am fure the Clothes are ready.

[Exeunt.

not

all

bee

a S

fho

Lai Mr hea

tho

ny

by t

to l per

this

ver

guil

Lat

fuch thin

dina

Bibl

diis

natu

Lati

tell

I

ACT. V. SCENE I.

The Cross. People walking.

Novel and Visioner meet.

Vif. Ood morrow, Mr. Novel, I'll warrant, you have not heard, or (which is all one) do not believe, about the late Battle in Flanders, where the French King is routed to all Intents and Purposes, and the Dauphin taken.

Nov. O God! Insupportable Impudence! cujus

contrarium est verum.

Vis. It is so true, upon my Honesty, that the Dauphin is to be sent over to his godly Wisdom, Mr. Salathiel, to be bred Protestant; he is the fittest Master for a young Prince——It had been much for the Protestant Interest that he had bred the present

Tyrant of France.

Nov. Methinks we should not have had such a formidable Enemy of him. The Dauphin is happy in this, that he hath learn'd his Latin ere he came, for I'm persuaded that he should have been in an ill road for it under the Tutory of Mr. Salathiel, who is as profess'd an Enemy to poor Priscian (gad ha' Mercy on him) as he is to King James, and hath no true Latin to himself.

Vif.

Vif. No Latin! Why, that's a Mistake; Did you not hear him repeat an Oration, Half an Hour long, all Greek and Latin, in troth, t'other Day?

Nov. All the Latin and Sense in it might have been said in a much shorter Space; there was never a Sentence of Roman Latin in it.

Vif. Roman Latin! quotha—I knew where I shou'd find you! A rare Thing! A Presbyterian Protestant Man speak filthy Roman Popish Latin, the Language of the Whore! I have that Charity for Mr. Salathiel, that you might as soon induce him to hear Mass, as to speak Roman Popish Latin.

Nov. I say, that's barbarous Ignorance; i'gad, thou understandest not, I mean such Latin as the ancient Romans spoke.

ts of

God,

tion

out;

the

unt.

you

one)

ters,

and

ujus

Dau-

Mr.

ttelt

h for efent

ch a hap-

e he

been

Sala-

ri/ci-

mes,

Vif.

Vis. Still worse: That's Pagan Latin. That's my Position, that a Presbyterian ought to speak Presbyterian Latin, and there should be an Act of the Assembly against all Roman Latin. I hope in God to hear none of it spoke till King James comes home again, which God, for his own Glory, will never permit.

Nov. Who can endure this? What think you of this Latin? Si aliquus virus colebit falsum Deum, seu verum Deum ut non præscriptum est, iste virus est guiltus idolatria.

Vis. Well, that may be good enough Presbyterian Latin.

Nov. — Demme! Si aliquus virus speaks such Latin, iste virus should be hang'd. But, what think you of Biblia potest apprehendi mediis extraordinaribus et supernaturalibus?

H

Nov. - I must tell you, he hath much original' actual, and habitual Folly; he looks as if he had not overcome the Fright of the late Persecution; or as if he had been dry'd feven Years at the Devil's Kitchenfire; he speaks like a Nurse counterfeiting a Bogle to affright an ill-conditioned Child; he walks as a Night-ghoft, or as if he was afraid, at every Step, of the Judgment of his Forefathers, Korah, Dathan, and Asiram; and, in fine, he thinks none at all.

Vif. - All damn'd Lies and Calumnies. -

Nov. - All true stories, i'faith; he'll make a Speech about media vox, syncategorematical Arguing, and such bombast Words, that he as little understands as you do the Confession of Faith. This he thinks sufficient Plea for the Reputation of a learn'd Author. He not only plagues People to hear his Nonsense, but has spoil'd much good Paper in his Time, that might have been employed, in wiping you know what, to much better Purpose; and all this out of no other Delign, fave to write what he neither cares for nor knows, fo it be against some Book of Credit, and some Author of Renown.

Vis. — These are all but false Reports and Slanders of the Malignants, for he's a grave, wife, and prudent Man; and, to justify what I fay, consider

but the Government of the College.

Now. Which is no Government at all, i'gad; I shall swear 'tis no arbitrary one; there's nothing done there, i faith, without the Consent of the People.

Vis. - People! sayyou - They are nothing but a Parcel of rambling, misguided Youths, misled by malignant Masters, and I sear they have got a wrong Wamp already; and, if it had not been for the Wifdom of Mr. Salathiel, I think most of the Scholars might have been chang'd as well as the Masters.

Nov. They are fine young Gentlemen, the Flower of the Nobility and Gentry; the Hope of the linking State; they have more Sense and Discretion than whole Convention. I hope in God to fee them

h

to ve

lik

fte

th

C

no

W

M

an

ar

an

th

ly

T

ba

I

fo

te B

B th have as much Power in the Kirk and State, as they have now in the College—Then you Dog!——

Vis. Then I and all of my persuasion will be forced to leave the Kingdom; for I'm sure they have several Times huss'd and hiss'd us out of the College like so many Jesuits. I always found the old Masters could have hindred these Affronts by their Authority, but now I must consess we are in a worse Condition than ever, for I see the new Ones cannot.

Nov. — Neither, indeed, they can—and 'tis no Wonder. What young Man of Sense would obey Masters who want Ability to teach, Wit to govern, and Honesty to be Examples and Patterns? There are few Youths in the College who have not more Latin than their Primar, and more Mathematicks and Philosophy than their Regents, who know nothing but metaphysical Jargon, and little of that too.

Vis. There were truly never so many Uproars and Tumults in the College as this Year, such as Bonfires making, Windows breaking, &c.

Nov. And good Reason for that.—They scurvily thrust out the old Masters, who had Sense to overrule the Students with Prudence and Discretion: The Government might as well have sent a Mountebank to the College, as that old Fop, Mr. Salathiel, to play the Fool to the Boys.—But, saith, I think I have lighted on't —Wou'd you know the Reason why the Government has made the Reverend Mr. Salathiel Primar?

Vif. What! I think I know it as well as any puny Tory.

nal,

ot

s if

engle

is a

of

ind

ea

ng,

er-

he

n'd

his

his

ou

his ei-ok

an-

nd

ler

I

ng le.

by

ng

if-ars

ver

kan em

ve

.

Nov. — Damn you for a rotten Whig! I shall tell you the true Reason: 'Tis to be even with Bolds for abusing them; they have set up an Antibolds, that's strenua strenuæ opposita; and for every Boy of poor Bolds's, Mr. Salathiel will have twenty; that's Bolds enervated, i'gad.

H 2

Vis. That's but the Effect of the Insolence of the Students, that must be tam'd.

Nov. Insolence 'tis not, for they use it frquently: 'Tis as familiar to them now to play the Fool with the Primar, as it was before to play with their They perfecute him most unmercifully, and hunt him and his Divines from Chamber to Chamber, like the Dissolution of a fanatical Convention, or a Terrier hunting a Fox and his Puppies.

Vis. 'Tis better to go to a private Chamber, than be abus'd by a Number of extravagant, infolent, mathematical Atheists.

Nov. Just contrary; for all are Atheists except Mathematicians.

Vis. O intolerable Impudence! Shew me a Mathematician among a Hundred that cares for the Confession of Faith? I'm told that the first Propofition of Euclid is to prove that the World is eternal; and the fecond, that there is not a God: Befides, one must have a Compact with the Devil ere he can understand them. I put it to the Trial, and upon my Honesty I cou'd not learn to speak one Word of them; fo I really believe 'tis true.

Nov. Gad, that's the Height of Ignorance, and deferves not an Answer -But, as touching the worthy Primar; his Folly is like a Sore in an old Horie, cure it in one Place and 'twill break out in another. He's now upon a Project for making a German Randy-beggar extraordinary Professor of Theology.

Vis. I must confess I was against that, my Reason is, we must be rid of Mathematicks. Now, I would not willingly disoblige a Man that can raise the Devil; fo I'm clear the present Professor of Mathematicks be made Professor of Theology. - There comes Huffy .-

Enter Lord Huffy.

-My Lord, this is the malignant News-monger [Aside to Huffy. I told your Lordship of. L. Huff.

1 V had had

L

liou

thro

L No ries mer be 1

to tha non fhip Pri: Co he' for gag

> the anı

you

W

to

the

L. Huff. Mr. Novel, I'm inform'd you get rebellious News fent or wrote to you, which ye vent through the Town.

Nov. Your Lordship's misinform'd.

Vis. Upon my Honesty, my Lord, he told me he had it from a good Hand, that the King of France had 50,000 Men in Arms, (God save us!) enough to cut all our Throats.

L. Huff. Well, Mr. Novel, I warn you to take Notice, if ye either hear, relate, or believe any Stories contrary to the civil or ecclefialtical Government, you'll be lodged in a certain Place that shall be nameless, and your News both; let me tell you that.

Nov. I affure your Lordship I shall neither hear nor believe any Thing that may offend your Lordship. [Exit Huffy]—Imprison me! Go and imprison your Colonel's Dogs!—Ay, Visioner, the Colonel you cur'd of a dangerous Clap last Year, he's advanc'd, i'faith, to be Commander in Chief, for murdering three or four of the Women and Baggage-boys. Gad, he has scarcely so much Sense as yourself.

Vis. But his Dogs, being (as you know) Dogs of the Government, ought to have given good Example.

he

it-

ool eir

nd

mon,

an nt,

ept

Ia-

he 0-er-

Beere

nd

ne

de-

or-

ie,

er.

non

ald De-

naere Nov. But I'll make you an Example for a Rogue, to be an Informer against honest Men.—Take the Wages you deserve. [Kicks him again and again]—And so farewell for ever.

Vif. Let me be burnt for a Witch if ever I do the like again. [Exeunt.

H 3

ACT

SCENE II. ACT V.

The Old Lady's Lodgings.

Frank and Will. drest up like fanatick Ministers, walking in the Hall.

Will. Is a strange Metamorphosis! I'm sure 'tis next to that of Jupiter's turning himself into a Town-bull. But that's all a Matter; the Ladies assure us 'tis the only Way to do Bufiness, Frank.

Fra. Ay, and a successful one, too, I'll warrant; Gad 'twill be as powerful as when Jupiter turn'd himself into a golden Shower.—The sweet godly Ladies cannot relift the Charms of that black Velyet-neck, and that freaking Mean, more than other Maids can the Tinkling of a Guinea.

Will. Methinks I begin to turn Fanatick all over: I could rail most devilishly at Antichrist, the Whore of Babylon, and the Government; curse Prelacy, folye Cases of Conscience, devour Pigeon-pyes, and gulp whole Bowls of Sack.

Fra. For my own Part, I'm much afraid we mifbehave; we might have had some Time to have acted our Parts, ere we had ventured on the Theatre.

Will. Then I give thee my fincere Advice thus: First, Thou must forbear that sparkish Mein. adly, Beloved, thou must banish far from thee all French Fashions and Phrases. And, 3dly, thou must mortify all thy corrupt Inclinations to speak Sense. athly, Thy Tone must be grave and affected, every Syllable produc'd to the Length of a Breve, or a Semi-breve, at least; thou must weary the Company ere they catch thee at the End of a Period, and then be fure they find no Sense at all. 5thly, Lie fro

àn

ar

th

M

21

of

E

R

fr

N

ta

SCOTCH REFORMATION. 69 incessantly, but swear none. 6thly and hastly, Beloved, eat Capons and Chick-pyes as thou hadst come from the Siege of Jerusalem.

Fra. I shall observe your instructions as far as I can, but I'm mighty distrustful of my Gifts that Way. [Rachel looks in, and cries.

Rach. The godly Ministers, Mother, Mass John and Mr. Samuel, that your Niece invited to Dinner, are come! They are the godliest, bravest Men, Mother———

1kire

ng

at-

do

t;

n'd

Ilv

el-

er

r;

re

у,

nd

if-

IC-

re. s:

ly,

ich

rſe.

ry r a ny nd

ie

H-

Will. Grace, Mercy and Peace be multiplied on this Famiy [Old Lady runs and bugs them.

Old La. Welcome to me, Gentlemen, and all your Master's Men.

Fra. We beg your Pardon, Madam; we own no Master.

Old La. — I know — But the Master of Masters.

— How could you be so long in Town and never ask for me? Tho' I say it myself, I have sed many of the Prophets of God in the Days of Tribulation.

— Look ye, in this Press were three or four, in this Closer were honest Mr. Solomon and Mr. Covenant.

Fra. But your two Nieces, Madam; How are

Will. Pray, hold thy Peace, thou'lt certainly spoil all.

ye here, such a rare Collection of Books I was buying.—There's Dickson's Sermons—There's Eleven Points to bind up a Believer's Breeches—There's Besse of Lanerk—There's Samuel Rutherford's Letters—There's good News from Heaven—And here's Satan's invisible World.—What think you, Mass John, of Satan's invisible World?

Fra. Indeed I think 'tis the best Sermon I ever heard.

Old La. Sermon, fay you!

Will. Every Thing may be called a Sermon, Madam, in fo far as you can get Uses of Instruction from it, and all that.

Old La. There you fay right. - Bring a Bottle of Sack.

Will. —O but 'tis a fad World this, Mass John, an abominable, curst, unjust, malicious, ill-natur'd World! [The Sack goes round.

Old La. A prying, cenforious, Soul-feducing, Gofpel-renouncing World! A malignant, backfliding, Covenant-breaking, Minister-mocking, a filthy, idolatrous, Sabbath-breaking, Parent-dishonouring World! A murdering, whoring, lying, coveting World; 'tis in a Word, an uncharitable, worldly World.

Maid. There's a poor Man, Madam, fays he loft his Means by the West-country Rabble.

Old La. Come you to tell me that, you Baggage!

—Beat him down Stairs. —O, Mr. Samuel,

'tis a troublesom, beggarly, officious World! A vain, a gaudy, a Prayer-slighting and Reformationoverturning World!

Will. Now I can say no more; she has run me out of Breath; she's a longer Practitioner at this Trade than I.

Old La. But how comes it Mass John says nothing

there ?

Fra. Then I'll tell you, Madam, 'tis an abominable, whoring, drinking, Reformation-overturning World, and all that.

Old La. That's faid already.

Will. Nay, Madam, you must excuse my Friend here, he useth to be deep in his Meditations.

Enter the two Nieces laughing and smiling. Old La. I was just going to call you, Nieces.

Will. to Violetta.] Is this the Way to use the Ambassadors of Christ, to mock us? I expected to have seen none of this within these Walls.

Old La. Settle me a serene Countenance, you impertinent Jade.—You'll laugh in Hell yet.

Vio.

0

two

you

to i

call

Wo

the

Bri

the

thi

nev

per

the

the

ly

the

I t

thi

the

Inc

Cu

he

his

go

We

Vio. Indeed no, Madam, we'll weep there.

Old La. I recommend you to the Care of these two reverend Gentlemen. They are to insuse into you good and wholesome Principles.

Fra. Indeed, Madam, we shall do our Endeavour to infuse the best we can.

Ta-

on 1

n, r'd

ed.

of-0-la-

d!

tis

flo

e!

el,

A

n-

ne

is le.

ng

ii-

ng

nd'

n-

re.

100

0.

[Offers to lead off Laura.

Old La. Nay, stay Sir! Since we are here, we shall call the Servants together.——You must speak a Word: Our Ordinary is in the Revelation, about the Beast with the seven Heads and ten Horns.——Bring the great Bible and the Psalm Book here!

Fra. Lord, how I fweat and tremble! This is the worst of all! God damn him brought me into this Premunire! Would I were fairly loose of this new Character! I make a Vow never to try the Experiment again. [Aside.]—Indeed, Madam, my Brother, Mr. Samuel, is much better gifted that Way. Will. Not I, Madam! Besides, he's the elder Brother, or Minister, and ought to have Place.

Old La. That's nothing; I have known frequently young Ministers better at Family-exercise than the eld. Indeed, for a Case of Conscience, or so, I think the old should be consulted.

Will. But, Madam, if it be about Horns, there's this farther Reason for it; my Brother, Mass John, there, understands the Business of Horns better than any Man this Day in the Church of Scotland——Indeed he hath a Piece in the Press relating to Horns.

Fra. God damn thee! When?

The Old Lady farts.

Will. He's telling the Oath, Madam, we heard a Curate fwear as we were coming up Stairs—I believe he was drunk too—But God dann him (bleffed be his holy Name) was at every Word.

old La. Ay, indeed these Curates are a profane, godless Generation—But I pray you go on, Sir;

we shall keep back Dinner for an Hour, or so.

Fra.

Fra. O Lord! O Lord! What shall I do? I'm resolv'd I'll run for't, and leave that Rascal in the Lurch—There's the Disadvantage of the Want of Divinity, now! If I had but learn'd the Who made Man by Heart, it might have lent me a dead Lift at this pinching Occasion.

[Mide.

Old La. Perhaps you do not use to exercise standing! Sit down, Sir.

Vio. The Gentleman looks as if he were indifposed, Madam; I would have you forbear't at this Time.

> [She throws up the Bible, (the Glass goes round) Frank looks aukwardly to it, and says,

Fra. — Ten Horns, say you! I say that Bible's quite wrong; the old Translation bath more than twenty Heads and forty Horns, and I know not how many Crowns, and all that. [Throws the Bible from him; shakes his Fift at Will.] — Well, Sir, if I be not reveng'd on you for this —

Lau. How I pity him! He's engag'd too far in my Service to defert him now in his Extremity; I'll try my Invention—Pox on't! methinks it is not true, that a Woman can frame an Excuse ere she put her Hand to her Apron-strings—I'll say the Dinner will be spoil'd; but that won't do, for she'd rather fast than want a Lecture. I'll counterfeit my-felf sick; but then he must pray, that's worse still.

Old La. I thought, Sir, this had been of the best Edition, but I'm resolv'd I'll have one of the old Version, for I always thought Antichrist should have more Horns than ten: But we'll take some other Place first that's right; or send for your own Bible, if you please.

Lau.

La

010

Vi

the L

is his

Saint

the I

of Ci

The Air !

fainti

is no

Andi

burn

this !

Mate

and a

I am

Mast

he h

own

fay .

both

Stanc

thef

is sp

14

So

Fi

0

So

01

Fr

73

Lau. Stay! I have it! [Aside.] Madam, I think the Lecture should be about St. Peter's Keys, for this is his Day---Shew me the Bible!

ľm

the

of lan

this ide.

nd-

dif-

this ave

nd)

ole's

than

how ronz

if I

r in

I'll

not put

Din-

d ra-

my-till.

Mide.

e best

e old

have other

Bible,

Lau.

Old La. Oh! Damnable and abominable! naming Saints Days here! [She faints.

Vio. Would St. Peter were here to raise her from the Dead!----Till he come, Maid, bring the Bottle of Cinnamon-water in the farther End of the Press_____ [They pour something in her Mouth; she recovers.

Old La. Stand off! stand off! let me get a little

Air! See there be no Lecture here this Day.

Fra. Indeed, Madam, I was night he Point of fainting too; and now, when I right remember, this is not only St. Peter's Day, but St. Matthew's, St. Andrew's, and St. John's too: I wou'd be sooner burnt at a Stake, than lecture in a private Family this Day.

Enter Mr. Solomon.

Sol. I'm e'en come to inquire if the oft talk'd-of Match betwixt your Nieces and the Lord holds?

Fra. Still worse! Then it seems we have Rivals, and a Lord, 100! [Aside to Will.

Old La. It will fail on their Side if it do not; for

I am fure the Banns are proclaimed long fince.

Sol. Indeed, Madam, I'm come to tell you, in my Master's Name, he's well pleas'd to marry them; he hath fill'd up the Blanks of the Contract with his own Hand, but he will not put on the Ring, and say Amen, to an Imagination.

Fra. All Mysteries! And will one Man marry them

both? He'll have enough to do, i' faith.

[ Afide to Will.

Will. Dull and insensible! Thou dost not understand. Can'ft thou never learn to distinguish 'twist these People's Meaning and their Words! The Sense is spiritual, I assure you, tho' the Words be carnal.

[To Frank afide.

Fra. Pox take 'em! Must a Man travel as far as the third Heavens to catch their Meaning? After this I shall be so wise as to hold my Peace, at least.

Enter Mr. Covenant.

Cov. I'm e'en come to take a Part of your Dinner,

Madam, and to ask if the Ship be come yet ?

Fra. Who the Devil can guess that? My Life on't that's something about Noah's Ark, or St. Paul's Ship.

Cov. If she be not come, ye may expect her shortly, for she set Sail from Heaven loaded with golden Comforts for yourself and Family. [Mr. Solomon and Mr. Covenant look to Frank and Will. and pull the Old Lady into a Closet.

Fra. to Lau.] Now, my Dear, I hope you are fatisfied as to my Obedience; gad, I'd rather courted you in a civil Way these twelve Months.

Lau. Methinks that Garb becomes you well. Faith, Sir, you're an excellent Divine. Pray one Word about Horns.

Will. No Time to be lost, Madam; resolve and go with us; there's a Curate dwells next Door, and gad our Clokes will conduct you down Stairs undiscovered.

Vio. Laura, 'tis e'en best to be resolute—What think'st thou! May we trust ourselves to these reverend Sparks?

Fra. Gad, we'll deal most discreetly and reverently with you! For, first, let us go to the Curate's House, and after he has mumbled over the Matrimony, ye have no more to say, I hope.

Lau. Lead on then, Sifter; you're eldest; I'll follow stoutly.

[As Will. leading Violetta, and Frank Laura, are going towards the Stair, they meet Lord Huffy, who justles Frank.

Huff. — Zounds, Sir, no Respect to a Man of my Quality! Why, Sir, not craving Pardon either!

Fra. No great Offence, Sir; I forgive you.

Huff.

you

F

at t

this

hav

1 dies

can tha

hel

hav

iter

Sid

byt

far

are

W

Ma

are fro

aga

Huff. -- 'Sblood! you forgive me! I'll teach you Breeding. Offers to beat Frank.

Fra. Faith you'll find me a good enough, Scholar at this Trade. Fly! fly! Man! run away from this Scholar — Gad I thought he should once have run over us.

[Frank lets fall his Cloke, and kicks him over the Stair, and looks after; then takes up his Cloke, and is putting it on the wrong Side outmost.

while Will. [ays]

r as fter

ner,

Life

ul's

ide.

ortlden

non and

fa-

rted

ith,

ord

go

gad

co-

hat

vent-

te's

tri-

fol-

ura,

ord

my uff.

ł.

Will. No body needs to fear his Wrath, fave Ladies, Boatmen, Hirers and Dogs; or any Thing that can take a Beating patiently. However, he's more than a Gentleman, i'faith! (as he told a Lady when he beat her) He's a Nobleman! I'll warrant we shall have twenty Lacqueys just now about our Ears.

Fra. If they be not better Metal than their Ma-fter, 'tis no great Matter.

Vio. Gad, Sir, you're a Turncoat! the wrong

Side of your Cloath is outmost.

Fra. Then, at least, I have one Quality of a Presbyterian Minister. But it matters not, we have not far to go. Exeunt.

Enter Old Lady, Mr. Solomon, and Mr. Covenant.

Cov. We never knew them; yet, perhaps, they are come over to work in his Vineyard, for the Work is great, and the Labourers few.

Old La. Where are they gone? Laura, Violetta,

Mass John, Mr. Samuel! All gone! Enter Maid.

Maid. Whom wou'd your Ladyship have?

Old La. My Nieces! faw you them?

Maid. They defired me to tell your Ladyship they are gone down every one of them to get a Covenant from the Minister, and they'll both be instantly back again.

Sol. Not much, Madam, only I think it convenient he marry your Daughter Rachel, for I fear there has been foul Play; but Marriage will make all Odds Evens.

Old La. What, my Daughter marry a Dominie? No, Sir; she shan't!

Sol. Then, Madam, to be plain, she's with Child to him, and it must be fo.

Old La. Oh! What hear I? My Daughter debauch'd! my Family abus'd! [Weeps.

Sol. Hist, Madam; let them be made one by Marriage, and there's no great Skaith: He's a well-gifted Man.

Old La. Oh! but the Scandal!

[Wrings her Hands.

inc

Led

25

Co

En

w

us

0

VC

th lit

be

do

m ba

W

Ь

a

T

Sol. This will evite both: I'll fay I married them feven or eight Months ago, and there needs no more.

Cov. Good enough; Marriage is but a Ceremony as well as Baptism. I have known many a good Couple do Duty like Man and Wife, that were never married; and good Ministers, Preachers of God's Word, that were never baptized all their Life.

Sol. I'll call them in ____ Brother ! Mass James !

Enter Rachel and Wordie.

Rach. Mother, you forgive me, Do ye not?
Old La. Since these two godly Men wou'd have it so, I am content.

Word. Well, no more Words, Madam; I'm your Goodson; I hope your Daughter shall live as godly a Life with me as you or she could wish.

Old La. I'm fure she has been christianly educated, many a good Prayer I have caus'd her say, many a good Chapter I heard her read, many a good Sermon and Lecture has she heard in her Time. I hope they have not been lost upon her.

Word.

Word. No indeed they.

Sol. Indeed no, Madam; I ever thought her well inclin'd; she's a constant Hearer of Sermons and Lectures; I never miss her from any.

Rach. I hope I shall find the Good of them as long as I live.

like

is to eni-

here

dds

nie?

hild

deeps.

by ell-

nds.

nem

no

ony

boo

ne-

od's

e it

our

dly

at-

na-

bod

rd.

I

Sol. Well, I wish God's Blessing on the married Couple.

Enter Will. and Frank, leading Violetta and Laura, undisguised.

Old La. Where have you been, Nieces? And where are the Ministers?

Vio. Here they are, Madam: They have cheated

us, and caused us marry them.

Old La. Are you married then without my Confent? And am I cheated under that godly Disguise? Oh horrid! [Pointing to the Ministers, who sneak off.

Will. Yes, Madam; we have done them the Favour to rid them of the impertinent Trouble of these Blockheads.

Fra. The Ladies think our Family-exercise a little more pleasing than the senseless Cant they have been persecuted with at your House, Madam.

dors of Christ, and the Presbyterian Religion, at my House! Get ye gone, ye Jades, with these debauch'd Rascals. Let me see you no more.

[Exit Old Lady!

Lau. That's no great Matter, Aunt, considering what we've gain'd by your seeing us.—But I'm sorry poor Rachel shou'd languish under the unsupportable Burden of a Maidenhead, and no Body to pity her-

Rach. Spare your Sorrow, Cousin; I think I have bestowed mine as well upon my Husband here, as you are like to do yours.

[Pointing at Wordie.]

Lau. A wordy Man, indeed! And are you married to him?

Rach. Yes, Half a Year ago ..

I 2:

Word.

Word. Indeed, I have betroth'd her, with her own and her Mother's Confent; and that I have.

Lau. I believe you have been in Bed together about Half a Year ago, indeed: For I was going to tell you, that I thought your Maidenhead was bulky a little, Coufin.

Will. Gad, the old Presbyterian Lady's sweet young Daughter is as sure of the Chaplain, as the waiting Woman is of the Valet.——But I wish you much Joy.

Lau. Methinks they have not wanted that, they have antedated it a little.—But, Coufin, where are your long Speeches against kissing of Men, and speaking unto them, these wicked Customs? There has been more than kissing and speaking here, i'saith.

Vio. But, come! enough of that! Let us mind

the Work of the Day.

Fra. ——And the Work of the Night too.
Exit Will. leading Violetta, and Frank, Laura, one Way, and Wordy and Rachel, another Way.

ACT V. SCENE III.

A Church.

Moderator, Mr. Salathiel, Mr. Covenant, Mr. Turbulent, Mr. Solomon, Ruling Elder, Clerk.

Mod. Brethren, we are again re-assembled about his own Work; I hope ye will not weary: 'Tis all our Interests to make a clean House of the Curates, and you will be on the Wings of the Prayers of the Flower of the Godly in Scotland. My Lord Whigridden has sent me his Excuse; for as he was coming, he was call'd to the Privy-Council, to consider of a Letter is sent by his Majesty in reference to our Assairs.

Turb.

to gre

fix

Di

ca

th

ma

m

dr

fir

th

h

A

in 11 ti

t

f

d

79

Turb. I think, Moderator, we should consider how to fill the Curates Places ere we lay so many Congregations waste, since we have not Men to fill the fixth Part of them.

Mod. Ha'd your Tongue, Sir, and let us do our Duty, and God will e'en provide.

wn

r'a-

to to ilky

veet

the wifh

hey

are

ak-

has nind

one

Mr.

out

rea-

e of

the

nd.

for

un-

in urb.

R. Eld. A Wast-Quintra Believer, Moderator, can teach better than ony Keerate i'the North, and they'll seen learn to gi' the Comeenion, baptize and marry.

mon Whore the Church of England, for we have dreffed our own gayly already.

Sal. In truth, Moderator, in the Days of old, the first Thing the General Assembly did, was to purge the King's Army of Malignants; now I think we have as good Reason as ever to purge the King's Army of Prelates, Papists and Atheists, which abound in it, seeing they are fighting for a good Cause; namube sinis est bonissimus, ibe media debent esse proportionabilia.

Mod. Outs, Mr. Salathiel, with your Greek! We know you're a Primary of a College; I'll tell you, we must not put our Hand farther than our Sleeve can reach. I fancy 'tis fittest and safest meddling with them who have no Power to oppose us, I mean the Curates, who, I think, have not many to defend them.

Gov. Outward Persecution is no Token of God's forsaking, for we were persecuted twenty-eight Years ourselves.

Mod. God only chastised his own People, but he destroys the Malignants: We did thrive under our Persecution, but the Curates are starving, which evidently proves them to be the Wicked. I think we should call in Mr. Orthodox, that Curate who stays on the East-side of Tay, and pesters that Country with Errors.

I 3 :

Cova-

Cov. They fay he's a good fober Man, and good

t

b

enough at his own Trade.

Mod. We have the greater Reason to be asraid of him, for he will do us the more Harm. But I assure you he's a Malignant of a deep Dye; for he teaches Prelacy, or Episcopacy, Arminianism, or Arianism, for they're all one, ye know; and, to conclude all, he's much for dry Morality.

All the Committee cry out Monstrous, damnable Opinions! Huge Errors! Soul-killing Doctrines! Out! Away with the Curate! Cut him down! Why cumbreth he the Ground ?

Mod. We'll e'en call him. Officer, call him in,

[Officer calls.] Enter Mr. Orthodox.

This is a Court fenc'd in Christ's Name, for there's no Appeal to be made; we design to be moderate; we'll only take your Kirk, that's all: And mark that! you are to be accused, as well on Faults to be done, as Faults already done.

Orth. Mr. Moderator, not to meddle with the Authority of your Court, 'tis blaiphemous to accuse me of Faults to be done, since God only knows them; 'tis as ridiculous to pretend to Moderation by only taking away my Living, since 'tis the only Way you can injure me.

Mod. Sir, you have learn'd much carnal Wit and Policy, but ye have not so learn'd Christ-Clerk, read the universal Libel.

Orth. I desire to know who are Informers, that, according to the Law of Nature and Nations, they may be punished if these Things be not made out.

Mod. They are honest Men, and so you are no farther concern'd.

Orth. I am concern'd they be not inhabile Witnesses.

Clerk. Whereas, 1mo. that late Incumbent at was born and bred under that boog

d of ffure

ches

ifm,

ali,

able

ies!

Vhy

n in,

for

mo-

And

Au-

e me

em;

only

you

and lerk,

that,

e no

Wit-

e Ininder that that hellish Order of Episcopacy. 2do. That he received Ordination at the Hands of Prelate and Prefbyter, for they're as guilty that add to the Scripture, as they that diminish therefrom. 3tio. That he concludes his flinted Prayers with the Lord's Prayer, which when our Saviour made, he was certainly drunk, if ever he was so in his Lifetime. 410. Grace doth not accompany his Ministry. 5to. He does read and recommend erroneous Books, fuch as The whole Duty of Man. 6to. He's supinely negligent, for he spends four Days in the Week upon catechifing, which should be more profitably taken up in lecturing. 7mo. He administers Baptism and the Communion privately, which is Charming and Sorcery. 800. Since the bleffed Revolution he hath kept no Falts on Sundays, ordained by us for feeking God's Concurrence to the abolishing of Prelacy and destroying the King of France. 9no. He would comply and fwear Allegiance to that Tyrant King James (who is both forfaken of God and Man) if he were restored again. 10mo, and lastly. Which is worst of all, he could join cordially and heartily with that Antichristian Order of Prelacy, if it should be brought back again, which God of his Justice will prevent. being guilty of all thefe, proves his evident Breach of the ten Commands, for which he ought to be degraded, deprived, deposed and destroy'd.

Mod. Sir, you have heard positively what you have done, and negatively what you have not done: They are Sins of the Scarlet Dye, and are sufficiently proven by honest Men, who have the Fear of God in them.

Orth. Sir, I should have heard the Depositions of the Witnesses, for I'm sure I can prove them all infamous, or guilty of Malice against me, and this is according to the Acts of Parliament.

Mod. Mr. Turbulent, What say you to this?

Turb.

Turb. Sir, We are not to be guided by your Acts 46

46

**

46

"

66

of

no

do

w

m

th

th

ha

us

do

fai

th

ho

 $\mathbf{B}_{\mathbf{I}}$

tic

bu

III

ca

 $E_i$

Po

of Parliament, but by the Spirit of God.

The whole Committee cry out ] Awa' with the Curate! He has had o'er lang a Lend of that good fat Stipend! One knocks rudely at the Door.

Mod. That looks like a malignant Rap-Officer, fee who disturbs us ! Officer opens.

Enter Captain of the Guard.

Capt. I have brought you the King's Letter, which must be instantly opened, and read, and obeyed.

Mod. We're about his own Work, Sir.

F Capt. Sir, you are about your own Bulinels, and making for your own Interest, and nothing at all concern'd with the King's Affairs.

Mod. Sir, you miltake us; I fay we are about Jesus Christ's own Work, in purging out the Curates; and when we have done God's Work, then we shall, in the next Place, do his Majesty's Grace's Work ..

All cry out. 7 'Tis better to obey God than Man! Capt. You may, and must obey us once, for we have God's Authority, fince we have Power on our Side: Make hafte, elfe-

Mod. — Else we were disloyal Subjects, if we difputed the King's Commands —— Clerk; read the King's Letter. Clerk reads.

" Gentlemen, "You know what Favours I have shewed you, "and have supported you, because I thought you " had the People on your Side; but I am told you "have loft them, by your driving so furiously: All " the World represent you as a People that are Ene-" mies to Monarchy, who are mad in Advertity, " and in Prosperity insupportably insolent. I have " often warn'd you to keep your ecclesiastick Do-"minions within Bounds, for I was not born in a "Country of jus divinum's; but still you go on with-" out Reins, and the Church of England, which hath "a greater People on her Side, hates you; lo We

of find

SCOTCH REFORMATION. 8

" find it for the Necessity of Our Government that " ye must not exercise your Villainy any longer in "Our Name; and therefore command you to dif-

" folve immediately on the reading of these; and "We require you to do it on your Peril, for We "are your Masters, and will be obeyed."

Mod. Brethren, What do you think of this Letter?

Let's

Cu-

fat

or.

ns.

ich

and all

out

Cu-

hen

ce's

an!

we

our dif-

the:

ds.

ou, .

ou

ou .

All

ne-

ty,

ave

0-

a

th-äth

We ind

Sal. We fit by a Commission under the broad Seal of Heaven; the King's Right is only cumulative, and not sbjestively privative. I think we should fit and do our Duty.

The whole Committee cry out ] And not be afraid

what Man can do unto us !

Capt. Do not trouble me with your ridiculous Cant and Gibberish, else I shall do my Duty; that is, to make my Soldiers drag you hence.

Mod. Sir, we will not displease you. Lord send the King good and godly Counsellors, who are for thee and thy Interest! He is but a young King, he has meikle Need of wise Men about him—But give us only Leave to speak a Word or two, and sing a double Verse to God, and so we have done.

Capt. You must not sing down a Summer's Sun, or speak a Word a Day long, else I'll interrupt you; therefore make Haste—[Exit Captain.

Mod. Brethren, we have brought our Hogs to a fair Market; we have joined with, and supported that perfidious Usurper, who hath disposses'd his old honest Father of the Crown, and his tender young Brother, and set them both a-begging for his Ambition: He promised to protect us against all deadly, but you see how we are guided; we should not do Ill that Good may come o't.

Sal. He hath a conscientia Hollandica, indeed, who can set up, in Holland, Atheism, or all Religions, in England Prelacy, in Scotland Presbytery, in Ireland Popery, and join in Duty with them all; infero ergo, si aliquis virus colebit falsum Deum, seu verum Deum ut non prascriptum est, iste virus est guiltus idolatria.

Turb. He pretends to defend the Protestant Religion, but he joins with the Enemies of it, as the Pope, Emperor, King of Spain, and every other Enemy of it. If the House be well built, I'm sure there's mony a foul Finger about it.

Cov. That Tyrant likeways faith, he hath secured Liberty and Property. 'Tis true, they are so secured, that none can call his Head or his Fortune his own. For here's a Man that's true both to God and his King in his own Fashion, he's clapt up in Prison; there's a Man treacherous to them both, he goes up and down the Streets—/That's bra' Wark indeed!

Sol. from a Corner] To be plain, King William is worse than Teroboam and Ahab, who made Israel to commit Idolatry, and his Queen is like that painted Whore Jezebel; the Dogs shall lick both their Bloods yet, and they shall be sent, with Nebuchadnezzar, to eat Grass in the Fields with the Beasts, for they are more unnatural than any Brute.

Mod. All Kings are Tyrants, and the Church never thrives but when 'tis founded on their bloods ——A hundred Pounds for one of their Heads again! O how wou'd that relish! Sweetly!

Sal. They are the Wicked of the Earth, and should be destroyed. I prov'd, three Years ago, that all the Kings of Scotland were damn'd; because they were all Papists; and now I think King William will not break off.

Turb. The Scripture saith expressly, that all the Kings of the Earth are set against Christ and his Cause. We should then observe the following Advice, Let us break their Bands, and cast their Cords as a sunder; that is to say, the Oaths of Allegiance and Assurance; and let us stir up our Brethren i'the West-country to shake this Tyrant's Throne.

All the Committee cry ] An excellent Overture !

We'll all follow your Advice!

Re-enter

Re-enter Captain.

Capt. Pack you off, you Villains!

712 e.

li-

he

Eire

ed

ed,

vn.

his

n;

up

ed!

am

ael

hat

oth

bu-

afts,

neoods eads

ould

the were not the his. Adords e and i'the

ture!

-eniler

Mod. We've e'en been praying for the King, for as ill's he's to us.

Capt. Get you gone, you Rebels!

Mod. Well then! we'll e'en fing a Verse or two out of the rooth Pfalm.

Exeunt omnes in Confusion, singing,

Set thou the Wicked over him, and upon his right Hand,

Give thou his greatest Enemy, e'en Satan, Leave to stand;

And when by thee he shall be judg'd,

let him condemned be; And let his Pray'r be turn'd to Sin

when he shall call on thee.

Few be his Days, and in his Room his Charge another take;

And cause the Terrors of the Lord [Scene closeth, his Diadem to break.

EPI-

EPILOGUE.

OUR Play is done; that Circumstance, the Plot, Our Authors have of meer Design forgot: For the Fanaticks, whom we represent, Have no fix'd Plot, nor regular Intent. They dash through thick and thin; amidst the Throng, They're-jumbled right, and all their Neighbours wrong.

Their Int'rest drives 'em on most furiously, Without the common Rules of Policy.

Perhaps our Freedom may some Anger raise:
We care not, since 'tis Truth our Author says.
We do, for Truth, with that same Courage write,
That honest Torries for their Kings do sight.
We fear not then a private Shot or Stab,
Nor yet the Fury of the Western Mob;
Neither the greater Rabble of the State,
Which did our own King Jamie abdicate.

Some also, who have much more Zeal than Wit, May think we do burkesque the holy Writ, Because our Heroes some times make Address In sacred Phrase unto their Mistresses; But the Intelligent will only say, We but observed Decorum in our Play. For Jack, without a Scripture-phrase, could ne'er His Mistris court, nor cheat without a Pray'r; And now, since Prayers are so much in Voque, We will with one conclude this Epilogue. Let the just Heav'ns our King and Peace restore, And Villains never vex us any more.

4 AP 54 F I N I S. rong, it, r ,